Party split near Hearnes warns

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Former Gov. Warren Hearnes, who claims to have the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination locked up, says state Treasurer James Spainhower's decision to actively seek the nomination will split the party.

"What I don't like to see is a divisive party," Hearnes said in a telephone interview from his Charleston campaign headquarters shortly after Spainhower made his announcement Thursday.

"What he's doing now is going to divide the party," said the former two-term governor, who finished second in the Aug. 3 primary behind northwest Missouri Congressman Jerry Litton.

Litton, his family and two others died in a plane crash the night of the primary as he recorded a stunning upset in capturing the Senate nomination. His death has now left the selection of a nominee to face Republican Atty. Gen. John Danforth in November up to the Democratic State Committee. The 60-member panel will meet Aug. 21 to make that selection with only Hearnes and Spainhower vying for the 31 votes needed.

Spainhower, a former state representative now the party's nominee for a second term as treasurer, had initially said he would not be interested in the seat. Then last weekend he said he would be avaialble for the nomination but would not actively seek it and Thursday decided to actively pursue it. In that time, the other perspective candidates except for Hearnes withdrew from consideration.

He became an active candidate, not to divide the party, Spainhower said, but because "some have doubted my sincere desire to enter the race and become a United States senator. My announcement should erase that doubt. I want very much to be a United States senator from Missouri."

He said the decision was prompted by contacts from hundreds of persons "asking that I actively seek the nomination." Spainhower reiterated, however, that he would actively support Hearnes if he becomes the nominee.

But Hearnes remained confident that his support from members of the committee was sufficient to capture the votes needed for nomination.

"I'm glad he's doing that," Hearnes said of Spainhower's entry into the race. "Now I think he'll find out what I've found out—that I've got 37 (committee members pledged to my nomination)."

He said he plans no further effort to sway committee members to his side, noting, "We've finished about all we can do. We've made every call we can. I wouldn't bother them again. If a person gives me their word, I wouldn't bother them again."

Spainhower, however, plans to contact all 60 committee members before the meeting, discounting Hearnes claims of support from the majority since "no one has any votes now because no votes have been cast."

He said the 73 per cent of the primary election voters who did not vote for Hearnes should be given some voice in the selection of a nominee and predicted members of the committee would be swayed by grassroots support.

The treasurer, saying the majority of his support is from Litton backers, contended he would have a better chance of beating Danforth than Hearnes because "I don't carry with me the residue that one can accumulate over 25 years in political office that has accrued to Mr. Hearnes.

Man wounded trying to flee Madrid jail

NEW MADRID — Jerry Brockman, 23, of New Madrid, was shot and wounded Thursday by a New Madrid County sheriff's deputy as Brockman fled from the county jail shortly after he had been arrested for investigation of possession of stolen property by a New Madrid police officer.

Brockman was treated and released at Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston for a bullet wound in his left thigh and has been returned to the county jail.

According to Deputy Sheriff Harold Allred, Brockman was shot by Deputy Johnny Martin after Brockman failed to heed three warning shots fired by Martin and a fourth warning shot fired by New Madrid officer Sam Hinton.

Allred said Brockman had been brought to the jail about 5:35 p.m. by Hinton. During the booking process Brockman was searched and five small bags of marijuana were found hidden in one of his shoes. As Allred started to place Brockman in a cell on the second floor of the jail Brockman broke loose and started running down stairs. He pushed pass Deputies Ronnie Adams and Martin who attempted to grab him.

With deputies in pursuit on foot and shouting to Brockman to halt he continued to run. The warning shots failed to stop Brockman and Martin fired again. Although the bullet passed through Brockman's thigh, he continued to run east along the railroad tracks. Allred caught up with Brockman and apprehended him about a block from the jail.

Felony charges of possession of marijuana and attempted jail break will be filed against Brockman.

Buie hearing reset

BLOOMFIELD — Preliminary hearing for Donnie Buie, of Malden, charged with felonious assault and rape on June 24, was postponed until Monday by Stoddard County Magistrate Judge Jimmie Trammel during precedings Thursday morning.

Trammel made the order after Buie's court appointed attorney asked to be released from the case noting that the defendent had retained a private attorney who was not in attendance at the court.

Buie's attorney was present however earlier that morning at a hearing in a Stoddard County Circuit Court before special judge Rex Henson of Poplar Bluff to determine whether or not his probation should be revoked.

In February Buie had been placed on probation for five years after being found guilty on charges of burglary and stealing.

The motion was taken under advisement by Henson.

Buie is presently in custody in the Stoddard County Jail at Bloomfield.

Thrills, spills and Tanya

Rodeo competition, entertaining clowns, a lively performance by Tanya Tucker and an appearance by Missouri Governor Christopher Bond, highlighted the first evening of the 24th Annual Sikeston Jaycee Bootheel Rodeo Thursday.

The animals faired better than the cowboys during Thursday's competition, with Tommy Steiner's stock throwing would be riders, eluding ropes and refusing to be wrestled to the ground.

Gremlins also invaded the first part of Tanya Tucker's performance, with spotlights going out and amplifiers coming and going, but the frustrations were overcome by the determination of Tanya to give the audience the show they had come to see, and the strength of her performance overshadowed the miner technical difficulties.

Singing a wide variety of country and rock songs, Tanya's show had something for everyone, including a rousing redition of "Jambalaya" and finishing with her ever- popular "Delta Dawn" that brought the crowd alive.

Tanya carries her own six-piece band on her road trips and at least a couple of the band members have been associated with famous performers before joining Tanya.

Tony Brown is Elvis Presleys piano player, but plays with Tanya's band when not on the road with Elvis. One of the newest members of Tanya's group is Milan Lefevre, who recently joined her as a backup singer. He is a member of the famous singing Lefevre family, noted primarily for their gospel albums.

Thursday night's performance was "strictly Tanya," as she did many of her hit recordings. Although the band was given several opportunities to show what it could do on the breaks, many of the spectators would have liked to have heard an instrumental number or two featuring the band, especially the paino player.

Governor Bond made an appearance before the large opening- night crowd to recognize the Sikeston Jaycees for their hard work, and the success of their annual rodeo event. Bond proclaimed Aug. 12, 1976 as Sikeston Jaycee Bootheel Rodeo Day in Missouri.

Another highlight of the evening was the remarkable and entertaining clown acts put on by Larry Clayman and John Taylor. Not only were the trained animals and humerous skits crowd pleasers, but the bull riders were a great deal safer with Clayman and Taylor in the arena with them, when the unpredictable bulls were turned loose.

Tonight's rodeo schedule will feature more action, with the riding events starting with the bareback bronc and including contestants Ron Law, Monahans,Tex.; Iky Akers, Clyde, Tex.; Raymond Gross, Bryan, Tex.; Andy Carey, Austin, Tex.; Leon Baker, Winona, and Bill Turbyfill, Austin, Tex.

In the calf roping, contestants are to include Wayne Spencer, Tryon, Okla.; Richard Mullins, Hugo, Okla.; Broadus Gravette,Cabot, Ark.; Bobby

Taylor wants new meeting

The entry of James Spainhower into the race for the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senator has prompted party executive committeeman Steve Taylor, 801 Vernon St., to request a special meeting of the state executive board before Aug. 21.

Taylor said Thursday afternoon he is in agreement with another committeeman who called for the voiding of the Aug. 7 meeting because of Spainhower's presence at the meeting.

Spainhower waited until after the meeting to announce he was a candidate to fill the position left vacant by the death of Congressman Jerry Litton.

Taylor said that Spainhower, a committee member, did not tell the committee while they were in session that he was interested in the office.

Spainhower waited until the executive meeting was over and the committee report was made before announcing his intentions.

"He has created a conflict of interest and should have excused himself from attending the meetings since he was campaigning for the senate nomination," Taylor said.

The executive committee agreed to propose that the Senate nominee be chosen by secret ballot, but Taylor said that because of charges of "underhanded dealings" within the party, the vote of each member should be made public.

"The vote by the State Democratic Committee should be open and each member should be willing to express himself openly as to which candidate he desires to fill the Senate candidacy," Taylor said.

Bloomfield ordinance gives green light to Route Y bridge

BLOOMFIELD — After nearly a year of work, a new bridge on Route Y north of town leading to the new Southern Clay Inc. plant is near to becoming a reality.

The city council Thursday night after meeting with representatives of the Missouri Highway Commissions and Farmers Home Administrations passed an ordinance approving the work to be done.

Under the agreement which must be signed by all three parties, The Missouri Highway Commission will pay 40 per cent of the total cost, the Ozark Regional Commissions (ORC) will pay 40 per cent and Southern Clay will pay 20 per cent.

The ORC is acting through the FHA and Southern Clay is acting through the city bureaucracy which will not be out any money.

After the project is completed, the FHA will require an audit to be made by the city but Mayor Glen Ayers explained that Southern Clay will pay for the audit or any legal expenses involved with the project.

Lynol Murray, district engineer with the highway dept., said that the commission hopes to have the project contracted out by Dec. with work to start in the spring.

The projected completion date is Aug. 1977.

To assure a free flow of traffic, Murray said that a one-way twelve-foot wide bridge will be constructed first which can be used until the entire bridge will be completed.

City officials did not give a dollar value for the project but Murray estimated the cost at $70,000.

In other business the council discussed speeders on Bloomfield Road and Smith St. but took no action.

The council has already requested the state highway commission to look into the situation and make a recomendation.

In addition to stop signs, Dyers suggested "go slow bumps" in the road to slow traffic down.

Planning group develops county goals, objectives

BENTON — Develoment of goals and objectives was the main order of business for the Scott County Planning and Zoning Commission Thursday night.

Frank A. Risler, community planner with the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission in Malden, presented a list of goals and objectives to the Scott County Commission as a guideline for use in the development of the commission's statement of goals and objectives.

The commission spent the rest of the meeting developing the preliminary goals and objectives to be used in Scott County after being submitted to the citizens for their opinions or suggestions.

Preliminary goals include, preserving the agricultural character of the county, providing for the orderly growth and development of Scott County, allocating county-owned land because it may become a scarce resource to be conserved rather than wasted, helping promote sound economic development and assure employment stability of Scott County, the Bootheel Region and the state, improving the health and environmental conditions of the county and preserving the historical character, such as heritage, buildings and landmarks of the county.

The list of objectives will include drainage improvements, ditch clearance, flood study and drainage extensions.

Road Improvements will include bridge repair and upgrading, a paving program and an additional interchange to the interstate.

Housing Rehabilitation will include deteriorating house rehabilitation and dilapidated housing removal.

Chamber hears report from concerned citizen

Dan Norton, chairman of Citizens Concerned About Sikeston, gave the Chamber of Commerce a brief update Thursday on the group's efforts to combat a change in the form of government in Sikeston.

The chamber also heard a talk by Ron Cook, supervisor of space communications for Beech Aircraft Corp. of Witchita, Kan. on the space shuttle, a reusable space ship which will begin flying in the 1980s.

Norton said the committee has about 50 people working in its efforts to combat the organization seeking to change the form of government.

A group of persons who refuse to identify themselves has successfully circulated a petition calling for a return to the mayor-council form of government. An election is expected in mid-September.

"We need to let the public know the dissidents are a small minority," Norton said.

He added that bumper stickers supporting the city manager form of government are being distributed.

"The next time Americans go back to the moon, it will be to colonize that planet," Cook said in his talk.

Beech Aircraft is a subcontractor for Rockwell International, prime contractor for the space shuttle.

Cook presented a 40 minute talk and slide show program on the history of space flight from the days of Buck Rogers to the space shuttle.

He added that the country is on the threshhold of major achievements in space where previously gained knowledge can be put to work.

"PROMISES, PROMISES..."

Promises of full employment surface again in this election year. During the interim between the Democratic and Republican conventions some politicians eager to get the votes of the 6.9 million people out- of- work are promising a "solution."

Their proposed cure for unemployment is the Humphey-Hawkins bills, named for its cosponsors Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (D.Minn.) and Representative Augustus F. Hawkins (D-Calif.).

This legislation would guarantee that all adult Americans, 16 years or older, would be given "useful paid employment at fair rates of compensation." It certainly sounds like a well meaning promise and a noble goal; but what about the means by which we attain so-called full employment?

If we track the path of past promises, we find the promise of a war on poverty and the promise of a great society and a promise of a model cities program are all gone to that great graveyard of ambitious social legislation; in short, a lot of promises with no deliveries.

The promise of the bill itself is independent upon a whole string of liberal promises. The President must promise to lower the adult unemployment rate to an arbitrary three per cent in four years — a level never achieved in the post World War II era — even if the federal government must become the employe of last resort.

The President must further promise to establish yearly goals for employment, production, purchasing power, and more promises to futher these goals.

If that's not enough promises to handle, the Council of Economic Advisors must promise to establish a process of "long - range economic planning" (a Soviet 5- year plan!) to ensure that all of the other promises are kept.

The unemployed do not need illusory pledges but realistic solutions. Perhaps the saddest part of all is that Americans will not even reap genuine benefits under the Humphrey- Hawkins bill. It is not so much for jobs creation as for jobs transfer; transferring employment and resources from the productive private sector of our economy to the government — with the bill passed on to the taxpayer.

And how much will the promise cost? The Department of Labor estimates that it costs them about $25,000 to create one public service job. Clearly, the American taxpayer cannot afford the luxury of the Humphrey-Hawkins "promise."

PENCHANT FOR COERCION

The nation's physicians have imposed high standards on themselves; and, with other medical professionals working under them, they have been instrumental in creating the high quality of health care now available to the majority of the American people.

One of the major threats to future medical excellence in America is the tendency toward regimentation that has become so evident in state legislatures, as well as Congress. The president of the American Medical Association has pointed out, "There are bills to make health services in general into a kind of public utility, with federally-appointed health planning agencies reviewing health care configurations and costys within each state. And there are the various national health insurance proposals, some of which would impart virtually dictatorial health care powers to the federal government." For example, there is legislation pending in Congress that would require medical schools to make each student serve two years in a medically-deprived area after graduation. Schools unable to comply with this order would lose federal financial support. Individual freedom cannot survive if one group of people, in this case the nation's doctors, are subjected to coercive measures forcing them to live and work where government authorities decree. The problem of doctor distribution is already being approached through such programs as the AMA's Project USA in which physicians are recruited to fill in for National Health Service Corps doctors in shortage areas. So far, there have been far more volunteers than vacancies.

A sense of responsibility to society is deeply imbedded in those who work within the U.S. medical system. The practicing physician values not only his own independence, but also the freedom of choice which the patient has to choose his doctor and the type of facility or organization in which he receives care. It would be a tragic mistake to allow the current penchant for regimentation to replace freedom with coercion. This would be the fastest way to kill the spirit of service and the drive for excellence of care that has been the most priceless characteristic of the U.S. medical system.

A TOUGH JOB

A major Florida utility company has published a special issue of its employee newspaper explaining with graphic clarity what it is like to hit the target of corporate solvency when inflation is riding high.

In the first place, the company has had to ask for a rate increase for only the second time in its 49-year history--an increase amounting to about 12.8 percent or some $4 a month on the average customer's bill for electric service. Since its last rate adjustment, this company, like everyone else, has had to deal with a 21 percent increase in the cost of living. But many of the company's costs of operation have gone up much more than that. For example, the price of millions of barrels of fuel oil required to fire its boilers has increased 300 percent. Environmental protection equipment in 1974 will be $107 million, and the company's total 1973 net income was something over $108 million. Total capital expenditures in 1974 will run at the rate of about $2 million every working day, some $588 million for the year, representing an increase of over $250 million from the year before. It has been estimated that by 1980 the utilities in the United States will have to borrow half of all the savings generated by the entire country to finance the growth required of them.

The catch is that, unless the industry is financially secure and rate of return on invested capital is high enough, it is doubtful that enough people will be willing to put money into utility investments at any price. Today, it is tough to run an electric utility company. Due to inflation and the regulatory process, rates always lag behind costs of operation. Yet, if investor expectations are not satisfied, new plant to meet increased demand for electric service cannot be built. In a modern, energy-based civilization this is unthinkable.

MARXISM, RELIGION: IMPOSSIBLE BEDFELLOWS

According to Christianity Today, one of the strangest alliances of our times is that which certain professing Christians claim to seek between religion and Marxism. Undeniably there are specific evils that Communists and all sorts of other observers can denounce and try to correct. (There are, to be sure, other specific evils that Communism and other totalitarian systems foster.) But Marxism is much more than just a catalogue of complaints against the way things are. It is a total world and life view that is utterly opposed to anything resembling histoyric Christian teaching--indeed, to the teachings of religions generally.

Cuba, the Western hemisphere's only Communist country, provides the best recent illustration of this. Cubans voted this year for the first time since Fidel Castro came to power seventeen years ago. The 5.5 million voters who went to the polls gave almost unanimous approval to the new constitution. That basic document had been drafted by the nation's Communist party congress a few weeks earlier, but the congress also wrote a working platform. A comparison of the two is revealing.

Article 54 of the new constitution "recognizes and guarantees...the right of each person to profess whatever religion he pleases to practice, within the legal limits, the worship of his choice." The phrase "within the legal limits" could of course mean only that polygamy or the use of narcotics or loud noises would be prohibited. That it has meant and will mean much more is evidenced by the working platform's explicit naming of one of the tasks of the ideological struggle as "the gradual conquest of religious beliefs." This conquest is not to be by taking "coercive...measures against religion," but "by adjusting scientific materialistic propaganda to the cultural level of workers."

The Marxist view is clearly enunciated in the working platform: "...religion is a twisted and fantastic reflection of outer reality." People who truly believe in a personal God to whom we are all accountanble for time and eternity are not Marxists even if they are properly outraged by some of the same things that Communists attack. And by the same token, people who are Marxists have absolutely no business pretending to be Christians. They should have the courage of their convictions and profess openly their disdain of a supernatural view of the world in favor of what is proudly called "scientific materialism."

To complement the wide latitude that the phrase "legal limits" allows for Cuban government opposition to religion there will doubtless be a very narrow interpretation of "the worship of (one's choice."

Worship is indeed a very important part of the Christian's responsibility, but so is the teaching of converts, so is the performance of works of mercy, so is the criticism of government or any other institutions that sets itself up as the ultimate authority, claiming in effect to displace God. These Christian activities are not protected, even nominally, by the Cuban constitution.

Some Communist prptests and programs may seem right and attractive when lifted out of their ideological context. For differing reasons, both Christians and Communists might protest abortion, for example. But we have to go behond rheto ic to an analysis of working Marxist systems, of which Cuba is the best example in this hemisphere. The testimony of its constitution should be clear to all: Marxism is one thing, Christianity is quite another. Let there be no more confusion whatsoever between them.

ENERGY AND THE RAILS

Energy moves the nation, and the rail system moves the energy. With some 20 percent of total U.S. rail carloadings each year devoted to energy-yielding products like coal, the railroad industry fills a key position in the distribution of energy. As such, it is entitled to realistic federal regulations and a comprehensive national transportation policy--the sooner, the better.

The rail industry's outstanding overall performance record is the product of extensive research and development programs to introduce such innovations as a sophisticated safety procedures, piggybacking, computerized freight car control and utilization. Freight cars feature greater length, speed and frequency as they travel through the countryside with minimum environmental impact and maximum fuel efficiency. The major problem appears to be the inflexibility of many of the present laws that govern the nation's transportation network, particularly in regard to rail rates and operational procedures.

The adverse impact of regulatory snags inevitably affects the nation's energy supplies, since approximately 70 percent of the entire coal production in the United States is delivered by the railroads.

U.S. parole system permits criminals to serve merely half jail terms

Victor Riesel's guest columnist today is this nation's highest federal "lawyer" – head of the U.S. Department of Justice. He is angered by the creaky American system of justice.

By EDWARD H. LEVI
Attorney General of the United States

WASHINGTON— Our system of criminal justice is not working well.

It performs inadequately in the prevention of crime. It has not restrained the explosive growth of serious crime in recent years. And punishment is not swift or certain, and is often perceived as unfair because it is unequal without reason.

Punishment has the attributes of a lottery. The evidence that there are unsupportable disparities among sentencing courts has to be taken seriously. As an example of the average imprisonment, sentence for forgery ranges from 25 months to 45 months among the 10 federal circuits. The average sentence of imprisonment for an interstate securities conviction ranges from 25 months to 65 months, depending on the circuit.

The sentence of imprisonment that is imposed upon the defendant in open court also has little likelihood of being, without translation, the sentence the defendant will actually serve. Last year, the average adult federal offender served less than 50 per cent of his actual sentence.

Because the criminal justice system has failed to impose sentences of imprisonment which are credible to either the public or the convict, the Department o Justice is very much interested in exploring the establishment of a Federal Sentencing Commission.

The establishment of a Federal Sentencing Commission would complement enactment of the proposal by the President for a system of mandatory minimum sentences for a number of serious crimes. Under the President's proposal, mandatory minimums would apply to extraordinarily heinous crimes, such as aircraft hijacking or major trafficking in hard drugs; to all offenses committed with a dangerous weapon; and to offenses involving the risk of personal injury to others when those offenses are committed by repeat offenders.

The President's mandatory minimum sentence proposal also includes provisions to insure fairness by allowing a judge to find, in certain narrow categories or circumstances, that an offender need not go to prison even though he has been convicted of a crime normally carrying a mandatory minimum sentence. A mandatory minimum sentence need not be imposed if the offender was less than 18 years old when the offense was committed, or was acting under substantial duress or was implicated in a crime actually committed by others and participated in the crime only in a very minor way. Under proposals now before Congress, the trial judge's sentencing decision would be reviewable by appellate courts.

One of the most significant of these proposals would permit a prosecutor to petition a federal appellate court for review of a sentence less than three-fifths of the statutory maxzimum, and a defendant to petition if the sentence was more than one-fifth of the maximum. The appellate court would have the discretion to deny the petiton or hear argument. The sentence could be overturned if it were held clearly unreasonable.

The sentencing commission, if it came into being, would be bound by these provisions, as it would be by the statutory maximum terms for any offense. There would be a large area, both where there are mandatory minimums and where there are not, in which the commission could operate to insure greater certainty and equality.

It would establish guidelines for all federal offenses within the limits of the criminal sanctions provided in the law. Building on the pioneering efforts of the United States Board of Parole, the guidelines would create categories based on offender characteristics, such as age and prior criminal record, and offense characteristics, such as whether or not injury resulted.

The categories would provide the basis for establishing relatively narrow sentencing ranges for particular categories of offenders committing particular categories of offenses. If a sentence fell outside the approved range, the judge would be required to state the reason for the deviation. Any sentence within the approved range would be considered presumptively valid and immune from appellate review. A sentence above that range would be appealable by the defendant, and one below by the prosecution.

A second proposal which the Department is much interested in exploring is the replacement of the federal parole system.

At the present time, every federal prisoner is eligible for parole after serving no more than one-third of the sentence imposed. Indeed, the latest statistics indicate that over 30 per cent of all federal defendants have been sentenced under a provision which provides for immediate parole eligibility.

The discretion to grant parole is designed, in part, to mitigate unfair disparities in sentences. We believe the sentencing commisison, however, would accomplish this purpose better and more completely.

We believe that replacement of the existing parole system would add credibility to our sentencing process from the perspectives of both the public and the offender. Each would know that the sentence imposed would be the sentence served, with the only possibility of a reduction in time served being for good behavior.

OLYMPIC POLITICS
By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

Cutting off your nose to spite your face is the old adage that describes the way some people let foolish pride hurt themselves.

The Africans boycotted the Olympic Games because New Zealand played a rugby game with South Africa – a total irrelevancy because rugby is not even an Olympic event.

The free Chinese from Taiwan boycotted the Olympics because the Canadian government denied them visas under the proper name of their country.

Canada's action involved reneging on its word to the Olympic Committee by cravenly caving in to a ploy by Red China to humiliate Taiwan. The iron fist in the velvet glove was Red China's threat to cancel its big wheat purchases from Canada.

Olympic athletes go through at least four years of heroic training and exercises requiring immense self-discipline and self-sacrifice. The iron determination that is the essential ingredient of success was illustrated by the Japanese gymnast Shun Fusimoto who competed and won on the rings despite a broken leg. It's a pity when the athletes are deprived of their chance to compete by the pride of their own country's politicians.

To the delight of the American television audience, however, the Olympic Games were a tremendous success.

Although the girl gymnasts from Romania and Russia were the most spectacular TV stars, some Americans were outstanding winners.

The greatest athlete in the Olympics, the winner of the 10-event decathlon, was an American, Bruce Jenner. At the 1972 Olympics in Munich, he had finished 10th. After four years of intensive training he defeated the Russian who won in Munich four years ago and bettered the Olympic record by an amazing 164 points.

The American basketball team, under its great captain Quinn Buckner, retook the crown that the Russians stole from us four years ago. The American men swimmers won 12 out of 13 races and broke many records. The American Peterson brothers, for the second time, won Olympic gold and silver medals in wrestling.

This time John Peterson won the gold medal in the 180-pound class; Ben won the silver in the 198-pound class.

The American boxing team made daily prayer a part of their training program. They won five gold medals, climaxed by the Spinks brothers knocking out their very tough Cuban and Russian opponents in the finals. An anonymous donor paid their mother's fare to Montreal to have the thrill of her life seeing her sons compete. "I knew they could do it," the mother said. "They depend on Higher Power."

The young hurdler Ed Moses was another athlete who prayed before every race. His coach is an ordained minister.

Although Moses had never run the 400-meter hurdles before this year, he set the world record and won by 26 feet over the second-place American, and by 40 feet over the third-place Russian.

The Olympic Games would be vastly improved if God were the only outside interference allowed. The politicians should keep their hands off.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Communists Pamper Athletes

by Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Confidential intelligence reports explain how the athletes from the communist bloc made such a spectacular showing at the recent Olympics.

The documents claim that communist countries have been force-training athletes for the Olympics since at least 1960. The star performers not only are subsidized but are pampered with luxuries in flagrant violation of Olympic rules, the documents allege.

This supports the frequent charge that communist governments develop professional athletes to compete against amateurs. One intelligence report quotes a past defector from the Cuban gymnastics team, Zulema Bregado Gutierrez, as stating: "All the athletes are professionals since athletics is their main employment."

She explained that Cuban athletes draw no salary but "receive other privileges which are tantamount to salary." She citied "free room and board and clothing." They get "much better food," and clothing "of the best materials available in Cuba," she said. These special advantages, she told U.S. intelligence men, "are not available to the rest of the population."

Another Cuban defector, Hector Rodriguez Cordoso, told about being sent to Russia to study physical education. Summarizes an intelligence report:

"For a classless society, Rodriguez said, Soviet athletes not only enjoy special class privileges, but they are actually segregated into categories according to their performance in competition.

"Most Soviet athletes who have won medals in competition of world significance, such as the Olympic Games, rank as first class athletes and receive a monthly stipend of 400 rubles in addition to other privileges such as automobiles, housing and the opportunity to travel abroad ...

"For every new world record a Soviet athlete sets," continues the intelligence report, "he receives a bonus of 1,000 rubles and other benefits." The document adds that lesser athletes also "receive considerable recognition, monetary and otherwise, above and beyond what an ordinary worker would receive in the Soviet Union."

According to the document, "Rodriguez was emphatic in stating that the Soviet athletes with whom he came in contact made no secret of the fact that their efforts to excel were spurred primarily by the promise of material gain."

For communist athletes, the political indoctrination is as intensive as the physical training. The Cuban gymnast, Zulema Bregado, reported that "at least 30 minutes of political indoctrination is mandatory before every daily training session." Thereafter, she was required to train for four hours "every day of the week except Sunday, year round."

The athletes are carefully coached on how to react at the Olympics. States an intelligence document: "The Cubans make a special effort to orient their athletes so that once they come in contact with foreigners, they have a preconceived party line which they are to use.

"Every effort made by the members of the team, individually and collectively is oriented to put the communist regime of Cuba under the most favorable light. For this reason, the Cuban athletes are considered one of the best means of conveying that message."

Some of these confidential documents date back to the 1960s. Yet they accurately forecast the behavior of the Cuban athletes who performed at the 1976 Olympics in Montreal.

The indefatigable Cuban runner, Albert Juantorena, dutifully dedicated his racing triumphs to Fidel Castro and the revolution. The formidable Teofilo Stevenson, the gold-medal heavyweight boxer, also always said exactly what Castro would want to hear.

Indeed all of Castro's athletes arrived in Montreal with a full repertoire of Cuban revolutionary slogans. Not one of them expressed a thought of his own.

There could be no denying, however, that the Cuban athletes put on a tremendous performance. Hector Rodrigez told in an intelligence interview how they were groomed for their triumph. Relates the report:

"Rodriguez revealed that every Cuban province had a Training Center for Athletic Initiation in the schools. The main purpose of these centers is to recruit promising youths as young as 11 years of age ... (and) train them politically and technically until they reach the age and necessary capability to enter another similarly specialized school.

"The latter is at the university level and is known as Superior School of Athletic Preparation ... The school is located in the former Cubanacan Country Club, one of the most luxurious of Havana, and the students receive privileged treatment with regard to food, clothing and housing."

The athletic triumphs are used, according to the intelligence documents, to divert public attention from "other failures" and to demonstrate "the superiority of Marxist-Leninism ideology in sports."

The Castro regime also inflates its triumphs by counting separately all the medals awarded to team members instead of the single award to the team.

The Cubans also divided "the number of medals gained by the number of the population of each participating country," states an intelligence report. "The main purpose of this statistical manipulation is to show that percentage-wise, the Cubans can field better athletes than any other country."

A sense of responsibility to society is deeply imbedded in those who work within the U.S. medical system. The practicing physician values not only his own independence, but also the freedom of choice which the patient has to choose his doctor and the type of facility or organization in which he receives care. It would be a tragic mistake to allow the current penchant for regimentation to replace freedom with coercion. This would be the fastest way to kill the spirit of service and the drive for excellence of care that has been the most priceless characteristic of the U.S. medical system.

A TOUGH JOB

A major Florida utility company has published a special issue of its employee newspaper explaining with graphic clarity what it is like to hit the target of corporate solvency when inflation is riding high.

In the first place, the company has had to ask for a rate increase for only the second time in its 49-year history--an increase amounting to about 12.8 percent or some $4 a month on the average customer's bill for electric service. Since its last rate adjustment, this company, like everyone else, has had to deal with a 21 percent increase in the cost of living. But many of the company's costs of operation have gone up much more than that. For example, the price of millions of barrels of fuel oil required to fire its boilers has increased 300 percent. Environmental protection equipment in 1974 will be $107 million, and the company's total 1973 net income was something over $108 million. Total capital expenditures in 1974 will run at the rate of about $2 million every working day, some $588 million for the year, representing an increase of over $250 million from the year before. It has been estimated that by 1980 the utilities in the United States will have to borrow half of all the savings generated by the entire country to finance the growth required of them.

The catch is that, unless the industry is financially secure and rate of return on invested capital is high enough, it is doubtful that enough people will be willing to put money into utility investments at any price. Today, it is tough to run an electric utility company. Due to inflation and the regulatory process, rates always lag behind costs of operation. Yet, if investor expectations are not satisfied, new plant to meet increased demand for electric service cannot be built. In a modern, energy-based civilization this is unthinkable.

MARXISM, RELIGION: IMPOSSIBLE BEDFELLOWS

According to Christianity Today, one of the strangest alliances of our times is that which certain professing Christians claim to seek between religion and Marxism. Undeniably there are specific evils that Communists and all sorts of other observers can denounce and try to correct. (There are, to be sure, other specific evils that Communism and other totalitarian systems foster.) But Marxism is much more than just a catalogue of complaints against the way things are. It is a total world and life view that is utterly opposed to anything resembling histoyric Christian teaching--indeed, to the teachings of religions generally.

Cuba, the Western hemisphere's only Communist country, provides the best recent illustration of this. Cubans voted this year for the first time since Fidel Castro came to power seventeen years ago. The 5.5 million voters who went to the polls gave almost unanimous approval to the new constitution. That basic document had been drafted by the nation's Communist party congress a few weeks earlier, but the congress also wrote a working platform. A comparison of the two is revealing.

Article 54 of the new constitution "recognizes and guarantees...the right of each person to profess whatever religion he pleases to practice, within the legal limits, the worship of his choice." The phrase "within the legal limits" could of course mean only that polygamy or the use of narcotics or loud noises would be prohibited. That it has meant and will mean much more is evidenced by the working platform's explicit naming of one of the tasks of the ideological struggle as "the gradual conquest of religious beliefs." This conquest is not to be by taking "coercive...measures against religion," but "by adjusting scientific materialistic propaganda to the cultural level of workers."

The Marxist view is clearly enunciated in the working platform: "...religion is a twisted and fantastic reflection of outer reality." People who truly believe in a personal God to whom we are all accountanble for time and eternity are not Marxists even if they are properly outraged by some of the same things that Communists attack. And by the same token, people who are Marxists have absolutely no business pretending to be Christians. They should have the courage of their convictions and profess openly their disdain of a supernatural view of the world in favor of what is proudly called "scientific materialism."

To complement the wide latitude that the phrase "legal limits" allows for Cuban government opposition to religion there will doubtless be a very narrow interpretation of "the worship of (one's choice."

Worship is indeed a very important part of the Christian's responsibility, but so is the teaching of converts, so is the performance of works of mercy, so is the criticism of government or any other institutions that sets itself up as the ultimate authority, claiming in effect to displace God. These Christian activities are not protected, even nominally, by the Cuban constitution.

Some Communist protests and programs may seem right and attractive when lifted out of their ideological context. For differing reasons, both Christians and Communists might protest abortion, for example. But we have to go behond rheto ic to an analysis of working Marxist systems, of which Cuba is the best example in this hemisphere. The testimony of its constitution should be clear to all: Marxism is one thing, Christianity is quite another. Let there be no more confusion whatsoever between them.

ENERGY AND THE RAILS

Energy moves the nation, and the rail system moves the energy. With some 20 percent of total U.S. rail carloadings each year devoted to energy-yielding products like coal, the railroad industry fills a key position in the distribution of energy. As such, it is entitled to realistic federal regulations and a comprehensive national transportation policy--the sooner, the better.

The rail industry's outstanding overall performance record is the product of extensive research and development programs to introduce such innovations as a sophisticated safety procedures, piggybacking, computerized freight car control and utilization. Freight cars feature greater length, speed and frequency as they travel through the countryside with minimum environmental impact and maximum fuel efficiency. The major problem appears to be the inflexibility of many of the present laws that govern the nation's transportation network, particularly in regard to rail rates and operational procedures.

The adverse impact of regulatory snags inevitably affects the nation's energy supplies, since approximately 70 percent of the entire coal production in the United States is delivered by the railroads.

U.S. parole system permits criminals to serve merely half jail terms

Victor Riesel's guest columnist today is this nation's highest federal "lawyer" – head of the U.S. Department of Justice. He is angered by the creaky American system of justice.

By EDWARD H. LEVI
Attorney General of the United States

WASHINGTON— Our system of criminal justice is not working well.

It performs inadequately in the prevention of crime. It has not restrained the explosive growth of serious crime in recent years. And punishment is not swift or certain, and is often perceived as unfair because it is unequal without reason.

Punishment has the attributes of a lottery. The evidence that there are unsupportable disparities among sentencing courts has to be taken seriously. As an example of the average imprisonment, sentence for forgery ranges from 25 months to 45 months among the 10 federal circuits. The average sentence of imprisonment for an interstate securities conviction ranges from 25 months to 65 months, depending on the circuit.

The sentence of imprisonment that is imposed upon the defendant in open court also has little likelihood of being, without translation, the sentence the defendant will actually serve. Last year, the average adult federal offender served less than 50 per cent of his actual sentence.

Because the criminal justice system has failed to impose sentences of imprisonment which are credible to either the public or the convict, the Department o Justice is very much interested in exploring the establishment of a Federal Sentencing Commission.

The establishment of a Federal Sentencing Commission would complement enactment of the proposal by the President for a system of mandatory minimum sentences for a number of serious crimes. Under the President's proposal, mandatory minimums would apply to extraordinarily heinous crimes, such as aircraft hijacking or major trafficking in hard drugs; to all offenses committed with a dangerous weapon; and to offenses involving the risk of personal injury to others when those offenses are committed by repeat offenders.

The President's mandatory minimum sentence proposal also includes provisions to insure fairness by allowing a judge to find, in certain narrow categories or circumstances, that an offender need not go to prison even though he has been convicted of a crime normally carrying a mandatory minimum sentence. A mandatory minimum sentence need not be imposed if the offender was less than 18 years old when the offense was committed, or was acting under substantial duress or was implicated in a crime actually committed by others and participated in the crime only in a very minor way. Under proposals now before Congress, the trial judge's sentencing decision would be reviewable by appellate courts.

One of the most significant of these proposals would permit a prosecutor to petition a federal appellate court for review of a sentence less than three-fifths of the statutory maxzimum, and a defendant to petition if the sentence was more than one-fifth of the maximum. The appellate court would have the discretion to deny the petiton or hear argument. The sentence could be overturned if it were held clearly unreasonable.

The sentencing commission, if it came into being, would be bound by these provisions, as it would be by the statutory maximum terms for any offense. There would be a large area, both where there are mandatory minimums and where there are not, in which the commission could operate to insure greater certainty and equality.

It would establish guidelines for all federal offenses within the limits of the criminal sanctions provided in the law. Building on the pioneering efforts of the United States Board of Parole, the guidelines would create categories based on offender characteristics, such as age and prior criminal record, and offense characteristics, such as whether or not injury resulted.

The categories would provide the basis for establishing relatively narrow sentencing ranges for particular categories of offenders committing particular categories of offenses. If a sentence fell outside the approved range, the judge would be required to state the reason for the deviation. Any sentence within the approved range would be considered presumptively valid and immune from appellate review. A sentence above that range would be appealable by the defendant, and one below by the prosecution.

A second proposal which the Department is much interested in exploring is the replacement of the federal parole system.

At the present time, every federal prisoner is eligible for parole after serving no more than one-third of the sentence imposed. Indeed, the latest statistics indicate that over 30 per cent of all federal defendants have been sentenced under a provision which provides for immediate parole eligibility.

The discretion to grant parole is designed, in part, to mitigate unfair disparities in sentences. We believe the sentencing commision, however, would accomplish this purpose better and more completely.

We believe that replacement of the existing parole system would add credibility to our sentencing process from the perspectives of both the public and the offender. Each would know that the sentence imposed would be the sentence served, with the only possibility of a reduction in time served being for good behavior.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

OLYMPIC POLITICS
By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

Cutting off your nose to spite your face is the old adage that describes the way some people let foolish pride hurt themselves.

The Africans boycotted the Olympic Games because New Zealand played a rugby game with South Africa – a total irrelevancy because rugby is not even an Olympic event.

The free Chinese from Taiwan boycotted the Olympics because the Canadian government denied them visas under the proper name of their country.

Canada's action involved reneging on its word to the Olympic Committee by cravenly caving in to a ploy by Red China to humiliate Taiwan. The iron fist in the velvet glove was Red China's threat to cancel its big wheat purchases from Canada.

Olympic athletes go through at least four years of heroic training and exercises requiring immense self-discipline and self-sacrifice. The iron determination that is the essential ingredient of success was illustrated by the Japanese gymnast Shun Fusimoto who competed and won on the rings despite a broken leg. It's a pity when the athletes are deprived of their chance to compete by the pride of their own country's politicians.

To the delight of the American television audience, however, the Olympic Games were a tremendous success.

Although the girl gymnasts from Romania and Russia were the most spectacular TV stars, some Americans were outstanding winners.

The greatest athlete in the Olympics, the winner of the 10-event decathlon, was an American, Bruce Jenner. At the 1972 Olympics in Munich, he had finished 10th. After four years of intensive training he defeated the Russian who won in Munich four years ago and bettered the Olympic record by an amazing 164 points.

The American basketball team, under its great captain Quinn Buckner, retook the crown that the Russians stole from us four years ago. The American men swimmers won 12 out of 13 races and broke many records. The American Peterson brothers, for the second time, won Olympic gold and silver medals in wrestling.

This time John Peterson won the gold medal in the 180-pound class; Ben won the silver in the 198-pound class.

The American boxing team made daily prayer a part of their training program. They won five gold medals, climaxed by the Spinks brothers knocking out their very tough Cuban and Russian opponents in the finals. An anonymous donor paid their mother's fare to Montreal to have the thrill of her life seeing her sons compete. "I knew they could do it," the mother said. "They depend on Higher Power."

The young hurdler Ed Moses was another athlete who prayed before every race. His coach is an ordained minister.

Although Moses had never run the 400-meter hurdles before this year, he set the world record and won by 26 feet over the second-place American, and by 40 feet over the third-place Russian.

The Olympic Games would be vastly improved if God were the only outside interference allowed. The politicians should keep their hands off.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Communists Pamper Athletes

by Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Confidential intelligence reports explain how the athletes from the communist bloc made such a spectacular showing at the recent Olympics.

The documents claim that communist countries have been force-training athletes for the Olympics since at least 1960. The star performers not only are subsidized but are pampered with luxuries in flagrant violation of Olympic rules, the documents allege.

This supports the frequent charge that communist governments develop professional athletes to compete against amateurs. One intelligence report quotes a past defector from the Cuban gymnastics team, Zulema Bregado Gutierrez, as stating: "All the athletes are professionals since athletics is their main employment."

She explained that Cuban athletes draw no salary but "receive other privileges which are tantamount to salary." She citied "free room and board and clothing." They get "much better food," and clothing "of the best materials available in Cuba," she said. These special advantages, she told U.S. intelligence men, "are not available to the rest of the population."

Another Cuban defector, Hector Rodriguez Cordoso, told about being sent to Russia to study physical education. Summarizes an intelligence report:

"For a classless society, Rodriguez said, Soviet athletes not only enjoy special class privileges, but they are actually segregated into categories according to their performance in competition.

"Most Soviet athletes who have won medals in competition of world significance, such as the Olympic Games, rank as first class athletes and receive a monthly stipend of 400 rubles in addition to other privileges such as automobiles, housing and the opportunity to travel abroad ...

"For every new world record a Soviet athlete sets," continues the intelligence report, "he receives a bonus of 1,000 rubles and other benefits." The document adds that lesser athletes also "receive considerable recognition, monetary and otherwise, above and beyond what an ordinary worker would receive in the Soviet Union."

According to the document, "Rodriguez was emphatic in stating that the Soviet athletes with whom he came in contact made no secret of the fact that their efforts to excel were spurred primarily by the promise of material gain."

For communist athletes, the political indoctrination is as intensive as the physical training. The Cuban gymnast, Zulema Bregado, reported that "at least 30 minutes of political indoctrination is mandatory before every daily training session." Thereafter, she was required to train for four hours "every day of the week except Sunday, year round."

The athletes are carefully coached on how to react at the Olympics. States an intelligence document: "The Cubans make a special effort to orient their athletes so that once they come in contact with foreigners, they have a preconceived party line which they are to use.

"Every effort made by the members of the team, individually and collectively is oriented to put the communist regime of Cuba under the most favorable light. For this reason, the Cuban athletes are considered one of the best means of conveying that message."

Some of these confidential documents date back to the 1960s. Yet they accurately forecast the behavior of the Cuban athletes who performed at the 1976 Olympics in Montreal.

The indefatigable Cuban runner, Albert Juantorena, dutifully dedicated his racing triumphs to Fidel Castro and the revolution. The formidable Teofilo Stevenson, the gold-medal heavyweight boxer, also always said exactly what Castro would want to hear.

Indeed all of Castro's athletes arrived in Montreal with a full repertoire of Cuban revolutionary slogans. Not one of them expressed a thought of his own.

There could be no denying, however, that the Cuban athletes put on a tremendous performance. Hector Rodrigez told in an intelligence interview how they were groomed for their triumph. Relates the report:

"Rodriguez revealed that every Cuban province had a Training Center for Athletic Initiation in the schools. The main purpose of these centers is to recruit promising youths as young as 11 years of age ... (and) train them politically and technically until they reach the age and necessary capability to enter another similarly specialized school.

"The latter is at the university level and is known as Superior School of Athletic Preparation ... The school is located in the former Cubanacan Country Club, one of the most luxurious of Havana, and the students receive privileged treatment with regard to food, clothing and housing."

The athletic triumphs are used, according to the intelligence documents, to divert public attention from "other failures" and to demonstrate "the superiority of Marxist-Leninism ideology in sports."

The Castro regime also inflates its triumphs by counting separately all the medals awarded to team members instead of the single award to the team.

The Cubans also divided "the number of medals gained by the number of the population of each participating country," states an intelligence report. "The main purpose of this statistical manipulation is to show that percentage-wise, the Cubans can field better athletes than any other country."

Port authority schedules development dates

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Decisions arrived at in executive session by the Southeast Missouri Port Authority Monday have established several important dates in the development of port facilities.

Secretary A.J. Seier said Wednesday that an Aug. 23 meeting had been canceled. Four other important dates were set. The dates and their purpose are:

Aug. 27—Deadline for receipt of proposals from engineering firms on conducting a feasibility study for a short-range port plan.

Aug. 30 — Port authority members will hold their regular meeting in Benton at 3 p.m. to distribute proposals submitted by the firms to members.

Sept. 7. — Board will meet in Cape Girardeau at the Chamber of Commerce building at 4 p.m. to select firms for making an in-depth presentation on their proposal.

Sept. 13 — Port authority will hold a day-long meeting at the Ramada Inn in Cape Girardeau for presentations by the engineering firms.

Purpose of the feasibility study is to consider as a short-term project the location of a port facility just off channel in the Mississippi River.

A grant of $26,250 was made by the Ozark Regional Planning Commission for an overall feasibility study after it was thought the Corps of Engineers might be several years away from doing a study.

However, the corps announced recently that it had received funds and would proceed. Since it is likely to be 15 months before completion, it has been decided to take the ORC grant and work ahead on the short term goal.

The long-range goal of the authority is to establish full port facilities, possibly along the Diversion Channel, and locate industry around the site. This may take 20 years.

Deloris Smith to head Miner's CF campaign

Deloris Smith, 402 Hux St., has been named chairwoman of the Miner Breath of Life Campaign against the crippling childhood disease cystic fibrosis, radio-TV personality Jack Buck, chairman of the Gateway Chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, has announced.

This year's campaign in Miner, according to Mrs. Smith will begin with a door- to- door march this fall.

Among the programs of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation are support for over 100 Cystic Fibrosis Centers across the nation. "These centers provide diagnosis, treatment and referral to children who have these lung- damaging diseases," the campaign chairwoman said.

The foundation also funds research to find a cure and control for cystic fibrosis, the most serious of these lung-damaging diseases, and to develop better treatments for children suffering from all lung disorders.

Cystic fibrosis is the No. 1 genetic killer of children, affecting one out of every 1,500 babies born each year and occurring when a child inherits two genes for the disease, one from each parent.

"We don't need more reasons than these to actively support the Breath of Life Campaign," says Mrs. Smith.

Big band sound comes to state fair

SEDALIA — The nostalgic "big band" sound of the 1940's will be brought to life Aug. 24 when Tex Beneke and His Orchestra present 6 and 9 p.m. grandstand shows at the Missouri State Fair. Beneke, along with vocalist Ray Eberle and The Modernaires with Paula Kelly, will perform Glenn Miller favorites which recently have returned to popularity.

Beneke joined the famous Glenn Miller Band in 1938 and became an oustanding attraction playing tenor saxophone and vocalizing hits such as "Chattanooga Choo Choo", "Little Brown Jug" and "I've Got a Girl in Kalamazoo".

After Miller's death during World War II, Beneke became conductor of the band, still operating under Miller's name. Later he started his own orchestra, in which composer-arranger Henry Mancini played piano.

Vocalist Ray Eberle and Paula Kelly and The Modernaires also were featured stars with the Glenn Miller Band, singing popular hits such as "Perfidia", "String of Pearls", Pennsylvania 6-5000" and "In the Mood".

For tickets or information about grandstand shows, write to: Tickets, Missouri State Fair, Box 111, Sedalia, Mo. 65301.

Port authority schedules development dates

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Decisions arrived at in executive session by the Southeast Missouri Port Authority Monday have established several important dates in the development of port facilities.

Secretary A.J. Seier said Wednesday that an Aug. 23 meeting had been canceled. Four other important dates were set. The dates and their purpose are:

Aug. 27—Deadline for receipt of proposals from engineering firms on conducting a feasibility study for a short-range port plan.

Aug. 30 — Port authority members will hold their regular meeting in Benton at 3 p.m. to distribute proposals submitted by the firms to members.

Sept. 7. — Board will meet in Cape Girardeau at the Chamber of Commerce building at 4 p.m. to select firms for making an in-depth presentation on their proposal.

Sept. 13 — Port authority will hold a day-long meeting at the Ramada Inn in Cape Girardeau for presentations by the engineering firms.

Purpose of the feasibility study is to consider as a short-term project the location of a port facility just off channel in the Mississippi River.

A grant of $26,250 was made by the Ozark Regional Planning Commission for an overall feasibility study after it was thought the Corps of Engineers might be several years away from doing a study.

However, the corps announced recently that it had received funds and would proceed. Since it is likely to be 15 months before completion, it has been decided to take the ORC grant and work ahead on the short term goal.

The long-range goal of the authority is to establish full port facilities, possibly along the Diversion Channel, and locate industry around the site. This may take 20 years.

Deloris Smith to head Miner's CF campaign

Deloris Smith, 402 Hux St., has been named chairwoman of the Miner Breath of Life Campaign against the crippling childhood disease cystic fibrosis, radio-TV personality Jack Buck, chairman of the Gateway Chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, has announced.

This year's campaign in Miner, according to Mrs. Smith will begin with a door- to- door march this fall.

Among the programs of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation are support for over 100 Cystic Fibrosis Centers across the nation. "These centers provide diagnosis, treatment and referral to children who have these lung- damaging diseases," the campaign chairwoman said.

The foundation also funds research to find a cure and control for cystic fibrosis, the most serious of these lung-damaging diseases, and to develop better treatments for children suffering from all lung disorders.

Cystic fibrosis is the No. 1 genetic killer of children, affecting one out of every 1,500 babies born each year and occurring when a child inherits two genes for the disease, one from each parent.

"We don't need more reasons than these to actively support the Breath of Life Campaign," says Mrs. Smith.

Big band sound comes to state fair

SEDALIA — The nostalgic "big band" sound of the 1940's will be brought to life Aug. 24 when Tex Beneke and His Orchestra present 6 and 9 p.m. grandstand shows at the Missouri State Fair. Beneke, along with vocalist Ray Eberle and The Modernaires with Paula Kelly, will perform Glenn Miller favorites which recently have returned to popularity.

Beneke joined the famous Glenn Miller Band in 1938 and became an oustanding attraction playing tenor saxophone and vocalizing hits such as "Chattanooga Choo Choo", "Little Brown Jug" and "I've Got a Girl in Kalamazoo".

After Miller's death during World War II, Beneke became conductor of the band, still operating under Miller's name. Later he started his own orchestra, in which composer-arranger Henry Mancini played piano.

Vocalist Ray Eberle and Paula Kelly and The Modernaires also were featured stars with the Glenn Miller Band, singing popular hits such as "Perfidia", "String of Pearls", Pennsylvania 6-5000" and "In the Mood".

For tickets or information about grandstand shows, write to: Tickets, Missouri State Fair, Box 111, Sedalia, Mo. 65301.

Breast cancer victim is first to try new cancer drug

WASHINGTON (AP) — A woman afflicted with breast cancer is the first recipient of an experimental drug that researchers hope will fight cancer without destroying the patient's bone marrow.

The Food and Drug Administration has given Georgetown University's Lombardi Cancer Research Center permission to give the drug, chlorozotocin, to humans for the first time. The breast cancer patient at the Lombardi center already has begun taking the drug.

The center said Wednesday it expects to put from 9 to 27 advanced cancer patients on the drug during initial clinical tests that could last six to nine months. Afterwards, more extensive human tests may begin at Georgetown and possibly several other institutions.

"We hope chlorozotocin, the compound we developed with studies at the National Cancer Institute, will prove a most effective cancer treatment without major toxic effects on bone marrow," said Dr. Philip S. Schein, chief of the center's division of medical oncology.

Mrs. Miller retires from delivering newspapers

ALTON, Ill. (AP) — Velma Miller, in her mid to late 70s, is hanging up her well-used, patched newspaper-carrying bag.

She is retiring after nearly 10 years of delivering newspapers on foot.

Mrs. Miller has 98 customers on her route, delivering Alton Telegraphs six days a week, come rain, sleet, snow or 100-degree temperatures.

With so many deliveries, she has to make two or three trips back to her house to reload her carrier bag.

Mrs. Miller said she first started deliveries to help her grandson, David Stalhut, who lived with her and had a newspaper route.

Bing Wilson, Upper Alton distributor of the Telegraph, says he hates to see Mrs. Miller quit.

"I'll have to hire at least two carriers to replace her. She's been the best and most reliable carrier I've ever had," he said. "In fact,she broke her arm on two different occassions last year and still managed to carry her heavy bag of papers and walk her two-mile route every day."

Astrologers say 1976 is the year for Erma for President

By ERMA BOMBECK

According to one of the world's foremost astrologers, this is my year to become President of the United States.

This came to my attention when I read that Sen. Edward Kennedy and I were born a day apart and he was given a five-star rating, the highest of any of the other presidential contenders.

There's a catch to it. We both have to get off our cusps and work for it against some odds. Is that the story of my life? I don't know about Sen. Kennedy, but I never get anything for nothing. The sun never rises on my sign. My planets are always conspiring behind my back. And my destiny always reads like it's been out in the natal sun sign too long.

I don't like to sound bitter but other people get all the good signs. Their horoscopes always read, "Poplarity and untold wealth will haunt you. There's no getting away from it." Or, "You are irresistable to every sign in the zodia. Give in and enjoy."

Not mine. They always warn, "There is a chance for compansionship around the 15th of the month, but it is a slim one. Your boring image can be lessened. Perhaps writing a check to someone who will sit with you."

Usually the people born under my sign are Martin Bormann and Anne Boleyn.

It's not nice to name names, but if my mother had held on just a little longer — a good month and a half — I'd have been a different person. As it is, I am basically weak and insecure and tend to go along with whomever is around me. When I ask someone for the time of day and they give it to me, I always reset my watch. It never occurs to me that I could be right.

Whenever I buy a weekender outfit with the jacket, slacks and skirt, I spill catsup on the jacket.

I never buy L'Oreal for my hair. I never figure I'm worth it.

Take today. I read through all the other zodiac signs and my body quivered for what I knew was in store for them. Mine? Same old melody. "The potential for a bright day is there, but you will have to work on it. Don't become discouraged by others who take advantage of you."

I don't think I could handle the presidency. Only one other fella on my cusp did it — George Washington — and then the poor devil had to bite the bullet with wooden teeth.

I'm not sure it's worth it.

Two treatments for water-stained marble

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — I do hope you or some reader can tell me how to remove water stains from the gray marble window sill in my kitchen.

DEAR S.W. —One installer of marble sills says there is a marble polishing kit available. It has putty powder in a burlap bag that one dampens with water and vigorously rubs on such stains. The harder the rub the better it will look. But if the spots have been there a long time, this may not do the job. Another such supplier said water marks are etched in so the sills would have to be removed and polished professionally. So, there are two answers to the same problem and from those "in the trade". — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve concerns dress patterns that are simply not made for tall woman. Tall women are longer from the shoulder to the waist and from four to six inches longer in length than average sizes. I like to sew and would rather make pants suits, gowns, etc. for my daughter than to buy them if the sizes were right. — IRENE T.

DEAR POLLY — I keep a small piece of carpet under the cushions to my bed-sofa to use under the metal legs when the bed is unfolded.

To avoid wasting flour when using it for "dusting" cake pans, etc. I always keep some in a tall salt shaker.

An old dish drying rack is great to use for storing pot lids upright. — SYLVIA.

DEAR POLLY — I had a sick child and when he was asleep I kept the door to his room closed to keep out the noise. But when I opened it to check on him the door would squeak. Not having the proper lubricating oil, I used a non-stick food spray on the door hinges as an emergency measure. The squeaks were gone. If a bit drips on the wood just wipe it off with a tissue. — LOIS.

DEAR POLLY — I am a seamstress who wishes to share a hint from my sewing basket. Always tie your knot in the end of thread that leaves the spool last. There will be fewer knots to bother with as you sew. If you are using a needle that is already threaded and it knots, break your thread and tie the knot in the other end of the thread. — CLARA.

DEAR POLLY—It is usually more economical to buy large size boxes of cereal, but those tall boxes will not stand up in many cupboards. I cut off about two inches from the top all the way around the box, shake the cereal down in the bag inside and refold the waxed paper so it fits on the shelf. — DOROTHY.

DEAR POLLY — My folding laundry rack serves as a plant stand to hold tomato seedlings. Start the seeds in egg cartons and the rack will hold six, two on each level. — D.F.

ICE CREAM, MAYBE

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Ice cream and sandwiches, maybe? Judging from the store sign, the proprietor of the restaurant appeared to be in doubt.

Actually, the neon sign had said, "Mayberry," but the "rry" portion burned out recently, leaving the "maybe" in effect.

Manager Cathy Burns called up a crew of workmen to restore the missing letters.

Dear Ann Landers

Reader writes 'Nine Years of Divorce'

Dear Ann: We would appreciate it if you would print the enclosed story. It is our fervent hope that two special people will read it and think of us.

Thank you for your consideration, Ann. -- No Identification, Please

NINE YEARS OF DIVORCE

Once upon a time there were:

1. A mother and a father.
2. Two sets of grandparents.
3. Two sets of great-grandparents.
4. Bunches of aunts and uncles.
5. A whole lot of cousins.

We remember your first puppy, your letters from camp, putting your first bikes together, having your pictures taken, your tonsillectomies, your teddy bears, your two summers in Florida, the family birthday parties, the holiday gifts and your excitement at opening the packages.

But when you were in the third and fifth grades there came the "divorce."

After that there was only:

1. One mother and a stepfather.
2. One father and a stepmother.
3. Two stepbrothers.

But none of the "before" people were around because your mother divorced EVERYONE, not just your father. Your "before" memories vanished. They were replaced with new things. All the past was turned into "bad times" and "bad people."

Now you are 18 and 20, and your "before" folks pray that one day you will realize your mother's words were not true and those "before" people never left you in thought, prayer or heart when you kids were taken away from all of us.

We're still hoping for a happy ending -- even after nine long years.

Dear Hoping: So am I. Please keep me posted if and when there is a reconciliation. Time can be a great healer.

Dear Ann Landers: A few years ago Paul and I went to Tijuana, Mexico, and engaged a Mexican lawyer who said he could get Paul a divorce and marry us all at once. It sounded very uncomplicated and we were delighted.

Paul filled out a long questionnaire and signed it. The lawyer declared Paul officially divorced the moment he affixed his signature to the questionnaire. We were then married by the same man.

Eighteen days after Paul and I returned to California, we received the divorce papers and the wedding certificate. On the wedding certificate was stamped "Married By Proxy."

Paul and I would like to start a family but we want to make sure we are legally married. We also want to make sure Paul is officially divorced from his first wife. My mother said from the beginning that it sounded phony and now we are beginning to think she might have a point.

Can you enlighten us?--Bilked Maybe?

Dear Maybe: If it's a curbstone opinion you want, the South-of-the-border quickies smell fishy. You need a U.S. lawyer -- and I hope you get one immediately.

Teaching your kids about the facts of life can be easy or awkward. Ann Landers's new booklet, "How, What, and When to Tell Your Child About Sex" can spell the difference. Send 50 cents in coin, along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request, to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120.

The Food and Drug Administration has given Georgetown University's Lombardi Cancer Research Center permission to give the drug, chlorozotocin, to humans for the first time. The breast cancer patient at the Lombardi center already has begun taking the drug.

The center said Wednesday it expects to put from 9 to 27 advanced cancer patients on the drug during initial clinical tests that could last six to nine months. Afterwards, more extensive human tests may begin at Georgetown and possibly several other institutions.

"We hope chlorozotocin, the compound we developed with studies at the National Cancer Institute, will prove a most effective cancer treatment without major toxic effects on bone marrow," said Dr. Philip S. Schein, chief of the center's division of medical oncology.

Mrs. Miller retires from delivering newspapers

ALTON, Ill. (AP) — Velma Miller, in her mid to late 70s, is hanging up her well-used, patched newspaper-carrying bag.

She is retiring after nearly 10 years of delivering newspapers on foot.

Mrs. Miller has 98 customers on her route, delivering Alton Telegraphs six days a week, come rain, sleet, snow or 100-degree temperatures.

With so many deliveries, she has to make two or three trips back to her house to reload her carrier bag.

Mrs. Miller said she first started deliveries to help her grandson, David Stalhut, who lived with her and had a newspaper route.

Bing Wilson, Upper Alton distributor of the Telegraph, says he hates to see Mrs. Miller quit.

"I'll have to hire at least two carriers to replace her. She's been the best and most reliable carrier I've ever had," he said. "In fact,she broke her arm on two different occassions last year and still managed to carry her heavy bag of papers and walk her two-mile route every day."

Astrologers say 1976 is the year for Erma for President

By ERMA BOMBECK

According to one of the world's foremost astrologers, this is my year to become President of the United States.

This came to my attention when I read that Sen. Edward Kennedy and I were born a day apart and he was given a five-star rating, the highest of any of the other presidential contenders.

There's a catch to it. We both have to get off our cusps and work for it against some odds. Is that the story of my life? I don't know about Sen. Kennedy, but I never get anything for nothing. The sun never rises on my sign. My planets are always conspiring behind my back. And my destiny always reads like it's been out in the natal sun sign too long.

I don't like to sound bitter but other people get all the good signs. Their horoscopes always read, "Poplarity and untold wealth will haunt you. There's no getting away from it." Or, "You are irresistable to every sign in the zodia. Give in and enjoy."

Not mine. They always warn, "There is a chance for companionship around the 15th of the month, but it is a slim one. Your boring image can be lessened. Perhaps writing a check to someone who will sit with you."

Usually the people born under my sign are Martin Bormann and Anne Boleyn.

It's not nice to name names, but if my mother had held on just a little longer — a good month and a half — I'd have been a different person. As it is, I am basically weak and insecure and tend to go along with whomever is around me. When I ask someone for the time of day and they give it to me, I always reset my watch. It never occurs to me that I could be right.

Whenever I buy a weekender outfit with the jacket, slacks and skirt, I spill catsup on the jacket.

I never buy L'Oreal for my hair. I never figure I'm worth it.

Take today. I read through all the other zodiac signs and my body quivered for what I knew was in store for them. Mine? Same old melody. "The potential for a bright day is there, but you will have to work on it. Don't become discouraged by others who take advantage of you."

I don't think I could handle the presidency. Only one other fella on my cusp did it — George Washington — and then the poor devil had to bite the bullet with wooden teeth.

I'm not sure it's worth it.

Two treatments for water-stained marble

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — I do hope you or some reader can tell me how to remove water stains from the gray marble window sill in my kitchen.

DEAR S.W. —One installer of marble sills says there is a marble polishing kit available. It has putty powder in a burlap bag that one dampens with water and vigorously rubs on such stains. The harder the rub the better it will look. But if the spots have been there a long time, this may not do the job. Another such supplier said water marks are etched in so the sills would have to be removed and polished professionally. So, there are two answers to the same problem and from those "in the trade". — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve concerns dress patterns that are simply not made for tall woman. Tall women are longer from the shoulder to the waist and from four to six inches longer in length than average sizes. I like to sew and would rather make pants suits, gowns, etc. for my daughter than to buy them if the sizes were right. — IRENE T.

DEAR POLLY — I keep a small piece of carpet under the cushions to my bed-sofa to use under the metal legs when the bed is unfolded.

To avoid wasting flour when using it for "dusting" cake pans, etc. I always keep some in a tall salt shaker.

DEAR POLLY — I had a sick child and when he was asleep I kept the door to his room closed to keep out the noise. But when I opened it to check on him the door would squeak. Not having the proper lubricating oil, I used a non-stick food spray on the door hinges as an emergency measure. The squeaks were gone. If a bit drips on the wood just wipe it off with a tissue. — LOIS.

DEAR POLLY — I am a seamstress who wishes to share a hint from my sewing basket. Always tie your knot in the end of thread that leaves the spool last. There will be fewer knots to bother with as you sew. If you are using a needle that is already threaded and it knots, break your thread and tie the knot in the other end of the thread. — CLARA.

DEAR POLLY—It is usually more economical to buy large size boxes of cereal, but those tall boxes will not stand up in many cupboards. I cut off about two inches from the top all the way around the box, shake the cereal down in the bag inside and refold the waxed paper so it fits on the shelf. — DOROTHY.

DEAR POLLY — My folding laundry rack serves as a plant stand to hold tomato seedlings. Start the seeds in egg cartons and the rack will hold six, two on each level. — D.F.

Dear Ann Landers

Reader writes 'Nine Years of Divorce'

Dear Ann: We would appreciate it if you would print the enclosed story. It is our fervent hope that two special people will read it and think of us.

Thank you for your consideration, Ann. -- No Identification, Please

NINE YEARS OF DIVORCE

Once upon a time there were:

1. A mother and a father.
2. Two sets of grandparents.
3. Two sets of great-grandparents.
4. Bunches of aunts and uncles.
5. A whole lot of cousins.

We remember your first puppy, your letters from camp, putting your first bikes together, having your pictures taken, your tonsillectomies, your teddy bears, your two summers in Florida, the family birthday parties, the holiday gifts and your excitement at opening the packages.

But when you were in the third and fifth grades there came the "divorce."

After that there was only:

1. One mother and a stepfather.
2. One father and a stepmother.
3. Two stepbrothers.

But none of the "before" people were around because your mother divorced EVERYONE, not just your father. Your "before" memories vanished. They were replaced with new things. All the past was turned into "bad times" and "bad people."

Now you are 18 and 20, and your "before" folks pray that one day you will realize your mother's words were not true and those "before" people never left you in thought, prayer or heart when you kids were taken away from all of us.

We're still hoping for a happy ending -- even after nine long years.

Dear Hoping: So am I. Please keep me posted if and when there is a reconciliation. Time can be a great healer.

Dear Ann Landers: A few years ago Paul and I went to Tijuana, Mexico, and engaged a Mexican lawyer who said he could get Paul a divorce and marry us all at once. It sounded very uncomplicated and we were delighted.

Paul filled out a long questionnaire and signed it. The lawyer declared Paul officially divorced the moment he affixed his signature to the questionnaire. We were then married by the same man.

Eighteen days after Paul and I returned to California, we received the divorce papers and the wedding certificate. On the wedding certificate was stamped "Married By Proxy."

Paul and I would like to start a family but we want to make sure we are legally married. We also want to make sure Paul is officially divorced from his first wife. My mother said from the beginning that it sounded phony and now we are beginning to think she might have a point.

Can you enlighten us?--Bilked Maybe?

Dear Maybe: If it's a curbstone opinion you want, the South-of-the-border quickies smell fishy. You need a U.S. lawyer -- and I hope you get one immediately.

Teaching your kids about the facts of life can be easy or awkward. Ann Landers's new booklet, "How, What, and When to Tell Your Child About Sex" can spell the difference. Send 50 cents in coin, along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request, to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120.

ICE CREAM, MAYBE

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Ice cream and sandwiches, maybe? Judging from the store sign, the proprietor of the restaurant appeared to be in doubt.

Actually, the neon sign had said, "Mayberry," but the "rry" portion burned out recently, leaving the "maybe" in effect.

Manager Cathy Burns called up a crew of workmen to restore the missing letters.

Richards climbs chart with 'Devil Woman'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I'm Nearly Famous," proclaims the title of Cliff Richard's latest record album. Quite so.

At 35, Richard has been a major talent in England and Europe for 18 years. As a pop music singer he has produced more than 60 hit songs. He also has starred in movies and acted in plays. He has had his own television series.

Yet he is virtually unknown in the United States.

For all his success in other parts of the world, Cliff Richard has never been able to crack the U.S. market. His only hit song was "Livin' Doll," which hit No. 30 on the national sales charts in the winter of 1959.

Now he is making a determined effort to change all that. His album is out on Rocket Records, the label owned by fellow Briton Elton John, and a single, "Devil Woman," is climbing the song charts. Richard recently blitzed through the country on a 12-day binge to promote the records and feel out a possible peforming tour.

"I'm excited about it," Richard confessed when he got to Los Angeles. "If people like the music I'll come over and do concerts. I'm not so ambitious to be an actor anymore; what I want is to be a pop singer."

That's what he was in the beginning, of course, and he did do a concert tour in January 1960, including an appearance on "The Ed Sullivan Show."

But as Richard tells it now, the United States already was wrapped up in the music of Elvis Presley, Ricky Nelson, Frankie Avalon, Fabian and other American singers. The Englishman got lost in the shuffle.

Then came the Beatles and the invasion of English rock groups. Neither Richard nor any other solo artists had much of a chance in that climate.

His popularity at home continued to rise, however, and Richard moved into films and adopted a safe, middle-of-the-road musical style that didn't fit in at all with what was going on in the United States. But he was much in demand in Europe, Japan and Australia.

"I've not missed America," the slim, handsome entertainer said. "For many years I never thought about it. I mean, it was not as though I was being ignored — not when one is told his records have sold 25 million copies. And that was nine years ago."

Tony King, executive vice president of Rocket Records, believes a number of things have happened in the United States over the past few years to make this the right time for Richard finally to gain attention here.

For one thing, he says, the music on "I'm Nearly Famous" is much more rock oriented than Richard's past material, although it still falls within the industry's broad category of middle of the road. For another, King says, the U.S. market is wide open these days for that sound or any other.

Temperature is more accurate, safer if taken under the arm

Most European and South American countries use the auxillary method for taking body temperatures. Writing in Medical World News, Dr. Lucia Fischer-Pap proposes that we follow the example of other nations and that physicians recommend checking a patient's temperature by this underarm method. "I've found it easier, safer and more accurate," she writes, "and many others agree."

Among the advantages she lists: It is easier to keep sterile and less likely to transmit viruses and bacteria from one person to another; it is more comfortable than the oral type when the patient finds it difficult to keep his mouth shut; it is better accepted than the rectal thermometer; it is not affected by hot foods and beverages; and under certain situtations it is more accurate.

What's the law?

Case of the kindly employe

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Marvin worked for a company that had more ups and downs than an elevator. During one of the company's downward treks, Marvin's boss cornered him one morning, and with a long face, asked Marvin if he would agree to waive his salary until business perked up.

While Marvin was quick to agree to the waiver, his own financial difficulties soon became as embarrassing as those of his employer's company. Consequently, he sheepishly requested payment of his unpaid salary.

"But Marvin," his boss reminded him, "you agreed to waive payment of your salary until business improved, and it's still worse than ever."

"When I agreed to forego my salary," responded Marvin, "it was out of the goodness of my heart and the softness of my brain.

"I couldn't afford it then and I can't afford it now. What's more, the waiver wasn't binding upon me. To be binding, an agreement requires that something be given in exchange for something.

"In our case, while I agreed to waive my salary, all you did was agree not to pay it. I received nothing in exchange for my waiver."

Insistent upon receiving his back salary, Marvin took his claim to court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you order that good-natured Marvin be paid his back salary?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that Marvin had, in effect, received something of value in exchange for his waiver, to wit: His boss allowed him to work for nothing. Even that, concluded the judge, is considered good exchange.

Richards climbs chart with 'Devil Woman'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I'm Nearly Famous," proclaims the title of Cliff Richard's latest record album. Quite so.

At 35, Richard has been a major talent in England and Europe for 18 years. As a pop music singer he has produced more than 60 hit songs. He also has starred in movies and acted in plays. He has had his own television series.

Yet he is virtually unknown in the United States.

For all his success in other parts of the world, Cliff Richard has never been able to crack the U.S. market. His only hit song was "Livin' Doll," which hit No. 30 on the national sales charts in the winter of 1959.

Now he is making a determined effort to change all that. His album is out on Rocket Records, the label owned by fellow Briton Elton John, and a single, "Devil Woman," is climbing the song charts. Richard recently blitzed through the country on a 12-day binge to promote the records and feel out a possible peforming tour.

"I'm excited about it," Richard confessed when he got to Los Angeles. "If people like the music I'll come over and do concerts. I'm not so ambitious to be an actor anymore; what I want is to be a pop singer."

That's what he was in the beginning, of course, and he did do a concert tour in January 1960, including an appearance on "The Ed Sullivan Show."

But as Richard tells it now, the United States already was wrapped up in the music of Elvis Presley, Ricky Nelson, Frankie Avalon, Fabian and other American singers. The Englishman got lost in the shuffle.

Then came the Beatles and the invasion of English rock groups. Neither Richard nor any other solo artists had much of a chance in that climate.

His popularity at home continued to rise, however, and Richard moved into films and adopted a safe, middle-of-the-road musical style that didn't fit in at all with what was going on in the United States. But he was much in demand in Europe, Japan and Australia.

"I've not missed America," the slim, handsome entertainer said. "For many years I never thought about it. I mean, it was not as though I was being ignored — not when one is told his records have sold 25 million copies. And that was nine years ago."

Tony King, executive vice president of Rocket Records, believes a number of things have happened in the United States over the past few years to make this the right time for Richard finally to gain attention here.

For one thing, he says, the music on "I'm Nearly Famous" is much more rock oriented than Richard's past material, although it still falls within the industry's broad category of middle of the road. For another, King says, the U.S. market is wide open these days for that sound or any other.

Temperature is more accurate, safer if taken under the arm

Most European and South American countries use the auxillary method for taking body temperatures. Writing in Medical World News, Dr. Lucia Fischer-Pap proposes that we follow the example of other nations and that physicians recommend checking a patient's temperature by this underarm method. "I've found it easier, safer and more accurate," she writes, "and many others agree."

Among the advantages she lists: It is easier to keep sterile and less likely to transmit viruses and bacteria from one person to another; it is more comfortable than the oral type when the patient finds it difficult to keep his mouth shut; it is better accepted than the rectal thermometer; it is not affected by hot foods and beverages; and under certain situtations it is more accurate.

What's the law?

Case of the kindly employe

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Marvin worked for a company that had more ups and downs than an elevator. During one of the company's downward treks, Marvin's boss cornered him one morning, and with a long face, asked Marvin if he would agree to waive his salary until business perked up.

While Marvin was quick to agree to the waiver, his own financial difficulties soon became as embarrassing as those of his employer's company. Consequently, he sheepishly requested payment of his unpaid salary.

"But Marvin," his boss reminded him, "you agreed to waive payment of your salary until business improved, and it's still worse than ever."

"When I agreed to forego my salary," responded Marvin, "it was out of the goodness of my heart and the softness of my brain.

"I couldn't afford it then and I can't afford it now. What's more, the waiver wasn't binding upon me. To be binding, an agreement requires that something be given in exchange for something.

"In our case, while I agreed to waive my salary, all you did was agree not to pay it. I received nothing in exchange for my waiver."

Insistent upon receiving his back salary, Marvin took his claim to court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you order that good-natured Marvin be paid his back salary?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that Marvin had, in effect, received something of value in exchange for his waiver, to wit: His boss allowed him to work for nothing. Even that, concluded the judge, is considered good exchange.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Aug. 13, the 226th day of 1976. There are 140 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1961, Communist East Germany sealed the border between East and West Berlin to halt the flight of refugees from East Germany.

On this date:

In 1521, the Spanish conqueror Hernando Cortez captured Mexico City from the Aztec Indians.

In 1688, King William's War began when Indians attacked North Yarmouth, Maine.

In 1848, the American flag was first raised in Los Angeles.

In 1898, during the Spanish-American War, the Spanish surrendered the Philippine city of Manila to the Americans.

In 1937, the Japanese attacked Shanghai, China.

In 1967, U.S. bombers pounded targets in North Vietnam and struck a railway yard and highway bridge only 10 miles from the China border.

Ten years ago: Communist China's Mao Tse-Tung won complete vindication for his country's tough policies at home and abroad.

Five years ago: East Germany, celebrating the 10th anniversary of the Berlin Wall, paraded the groups which built it.

One year ago: General Motors announced it would raise prices on its 1976 model cars by an average of about 4½ per cent.

Thought for today: Man is not made for defeat — Ernest Hemingway, 1899-1961.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago, Gen. George Washington, expecting an attack on New York, packed all his important papers and ordered them to be forwarded to Philadelphia for safe keeping.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Aug. 13, the 226th day of 1976. There are 140 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1961, Communist East Germany sealed the border between East and West Berlin to halt the flight of refugees from East Germany.

On this date:

In 1521, the Spanish conqueror Hernando Cortez captured Mexico City from the Aztec Indians.

In 1688, King William's War began when Indians attacked North Yarmouth, Maine.

In 1848, the American flag was first raised in Los Angeles.

In 1898, during the Spanish-American War, the Spanish surrendered the Philippine city of Manila to the Americans.

In 1937, the Japanese attacked Shanghai, China.

In 1967, U.S. bombers pounded targets in North Vietnam and struck a railway yard and highway bridge only 10 miles from the China border.

Ten years ago: Communist China's Mao Tse-Tung won complete vindication for his country's tough policies at home and abroad.

Five years ago: East Germany, celebrating the 10th anniversary of the Berlin Wall, paraded the groups which built it.

One year ago: General Motors announced it would raise prices on its 1976 model cars by an average of about 4½ per cent.

Today's birthdays: Cuba's Premier Fidel Castro is 50 years old. Movie director Alfred Hitchcock is 77.

Thought for today: Man is not made for defeat — Ernest Hemingway, 1899-1961.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago, Gen. George Washington, expecting an attack on New York, packed all his important papers and ordered them to be forwarded to Philadelphia for safe keeping.

Convention platform

Republicans to support equal rights

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Republican Platform Committee reversed a preliminary decision and voted to support the Equal Rights Amendment. Now it is under pressure to switch again in favor of tougher stances on such issues as the Panama Canal and diplomacy in Africa.

Ronald Reagan supporters and others dissatisfied with platform subcommittee actions on defense and foreign policy have their last chance to get their views into the document being drafted for the convention opening Monday. The draft platform must go to the printer today so delegates can have copies on arrival. The convention has the final say on the platform.

The committee has worked into the early morning twice to meet the deadline. A subcommittee decision to omit a call for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment — a platform fixture for 36 years — brought furious reaction from feminists and their supporters. The full committee voted 51 to 47 Thursday night to include the endorsement.

The committee voted to retain a statement supporting "the efforts of those who seek enactment of a constitutional amendment to restore protection of the right to life for unborn children."

Even after the abortion plank was nailed down, members continued to argue as to exactly what they had committed their party to do. Advocates of the plank said it is broad enough to accommodate the positions of both candidates. President Ford has said he opposes abortion but would leave the decisions to the states and Reagan has advocated an amendment against abortion in all but extreme cases.

Moderate and conservative Republicans shared successes Thursday.

The platform writers recommended consideration of ending federal aid to education and instead eliminating federal taxes on tobacco so the states could pick up that revenue, estimated at $2.3 billion annually.

They came out against busing children to schools on a basis of racial balance and for a constitutional amendment if needed to stop the practice.

Another constitutional amendment was proposed to allow local communities to have prayer in schools.

Compulsory registration of firearms was opposed in another plank.

The platform writers also opposed efforts to repeal the federal provision under which states may prohibit union shops, with workers required to join labor organizations.

They called for reform of the welfare system, with tougher regulations on food stamps.

Discussing taxes and government spending, the platform draft denounces the Humphrey-Hawkins bill pushed by Democrats as a way to put the unemployed into jobs, some at government expense.

The platform draft endorses tax changes to encourage investment, especially through employe stock plans and easier taxation of dividends.

Tax credits for expenses of college and technical education also won approval, as well as credits for private school costs.

Convention protestors are protested

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The protesters camping out in Penn Valley Park for the start next week of the Republican National Convention are, themselves, being protested.

A group of Illinois Collegiate Young Republicans held a news conference Thursday to say the city should also allow them to camp out, or "run out the protesters who are sleeping there now."

"We have been given the runaround by city officials here when we try to get a permit for the park, and they're letting those people stay out there in the park illegally," said Richard Jensen of Zion, Ill.

Jensen, 20, said the Illinois Young Republicans were forced to impose on friends in Kansas City, Kan., for the duration of the convention.

"We don't understand why there is this double standard," said Todd Hertzberg of Winthrop Harbor, Ill., another spokesman for the visiting Young Republicans.

He and Jensen said they oppose governmental officials taking "a soft attitude toward protesters because they are afraid they might be going to do something violent if they don't."

Meanwhile, the Kansas City Convention Coalition of protesters laid down an ultimatum to city fathers, demanding portable comfort stations, or they will dig their own latrines at the park.

The city has rejected the coalition's demands, contending the park's two permanent facilities should suffice for now.

Al Brooks, assistant city manager, said Thursday the situation is being monitored daily to see if portable toilets are necessary.

In the meantime, some of the protesters have been making use of toilets at nearby Crown Center Hotel, where President Ford has a plush suite of rooms set aside for the convention.

Some, chanting, "We want water," gathered at the hotel entrance Thursday night after marching from Penn Valley Park, about two blocks away.

A spokesman asked permission of hotel officials to line up single file for use of the hotel's lobby drinking facilities. When refused, they resumed shouting and chanting, but did not block movement of hotel traffic or guests.

The ranks of protesters swelled to an estimated 100 Thursday, attracting a steady stream of sightseers in cars to observe the new park inhabitants.

One protester, a young woman who called herself Little Fawn, said she hitchhiked here from Colorado.

Missouri corn production is struggling through drought

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The cautious view state agriculture officials took a month ago at federal projections for record Missouri corn production proved wise as the latest production estimate has plummeted.

But while farmers struggle through the third drought in as many years, retail food prices should remain stable since the drought appears to have affected little else than Missouri.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture, releasing crop projections on Thursday based on field conditions as of Aug. 1, predicted drought-stricken Missouri fields will produce only 202 million bushels of corn, or 70 bushels an acre, "which reflects the effect of the extended dry weather in July."

That is down 43 million bushels, or 15 bushels an acre, from the July projection, and state officials believe it is still too high because of rainless days throughout the state until this week.

"I would say that the corn has been hurt additionally," said Bud Nelson of the Missouri Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, and J. W. Abbott of the state Agriculture Department added, "In my estimate it would be closer to a 50 to 55 bushel an acre yield than it would be to 70. I just don't think we've got that much corn out there."

The USDA also released its first estimate for the soybean crop, the other cash crop most Missouri farmers depend on. That projection was for only 108 million bushels, or 25 bushels an acre.

Crop outlook causes no change in prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department officials say the latest crop estimates give them no reason to change their current prediction that retail food prices will increase 3 to 4 per cent this year, compared with 8.5 per cent last year.

The August crop-production report that the Agriculture Department issued Thursday included a continued forecast as of Aug. 1 for a record corn crop of 6.19 billion bushels, 7 per cent above last year's mark.

Corn is the major ingredient of the feed for beef and dairy cattle, chickens, turkeys and hogs, the starting point for "big-ticket items" in the American grocery-buyer's shopping budget.

Such plentiful supplies of corn should mean "reasonable prices" for corn and other grain farmers, and more meat, eggs and dairy products available at moderate prices, according to Don Paarlberg, USDA's director of economics.

Paarlberg said growing conditions worsened during July in the upper Great Plains and the western Corn Belt, "but despite that, the crops that are growing out there are only a scratch below the previous record" for production of all U.S. crops.

Stark Manufacturing moves to Charleston

CHARLESTON — A new firm, Stark Manufacturing Co., has leased the former Charleston Fiberglass Co. plant in the Charleston Industrial Park, and plans to be producing brazed aluminum headers for the air conditioning industry within six months.

Dick Dawson, head of the company, signed the lease Thursday at the Chamber of Commerce office.

Dawson described the manufacturing operation as a "labor intensive" procedure, in which parts and tubes are connected and then the entire apparatus is placed in a furnace at 1,100 degrees to seal all the connections.

The manufacturer said he is in the process of buying equipment for the operation, and hopes to be moving it into the factory building by the end of the month.

Initial employment will be small—five to 10 persons—growing as the local operation progresses. Dawson put no upper limit on the ultimate size of the work force. Production could begin as early as four months from now, he said.

Dawson emphasized that no hiring will take place for the next couple of months, and said an announcement will be made later as to the time and place for prospective employes to sign up.

Dawson said he and his wife, Sally, hope to move to Charleston in "a couple of weeks". They are renting a house at 307 E. Commercial St.

Members of the Catholic Church, the Dawsons have two children, Bryan, age 3½, and Kate, 1. They are now living in Camdenton.

Dawson is a native of Wichita, Kan., and his wife is from California. He attended University of Kansas at Lawrence and has a degree in industrial management. He has been product manager of the Dawson Metal Products Co., a subsidiary of Sunstrand Air Comfort Products Co.

Bernie to hold public hearing Aug. 27

BERNIE — A public hearing to discuss how the city could use a possible $400,000 federal grant, which had been scheduled Thursday night, was postponed until Aug. 27.

Mayor R.B. Woods said the reason for the delay was that the city did not have the announcement of the meeting advertised in a local paper as required by law.

East Prairie Schools will begin school year on Aug. 30

EAST PRAIRIE — Students in the East Prairie R-2 School District will begin the 1976-77 fall term at 8:15 a.m. Aug. 30 with a full day schedule, according to Supt. Gerald McElrath.

New students who have moved into the district since last year should register at their attendance center office before Aug. 25.

For the first time all schools will have a closed lunch hour and each student will be required to remain at school for the entire day. Lunches will be served the first day of school and arrangements—have been made for a cafeteria in the high school, where a type A lunch will be served. Snack bars will be available in both senior and junior high schools.

Cost of the school lunches daily for students will be: R.A. Doyle Elementary School, 30 cents; A.J. Martin Elementary School, 35 cents; and A.L. Webb Junior High and Senior High, 50 cents.

McElrath said it would be helpful to the school if parents could pay for lunches by the week instead of daily, saving time in collection of money and providing better planning of the number of meals served by the week.

Students whose family qualifies may apply for free or reduced-price lunches, and forms for making application will be available to each student at the beginning of their enrollment.

Bus routes will be approximately the same as last year, and anyone with questions about transportation is asked to call the bus garage at telephone number 649-2224.

A mobile classroom unit has been provided at the Doyle school to facilitate the first and second grade pupils who need extra assistance in the basic skills areas. Three staff members will be employed in this unit to direct activities.

Webb Junior High has had considerable improvements made, including new heating and air conditioning, removal of furnace pipes, a snack bar in the annex building, painting and new draperies in some areas.

McElrath said the school staff has been completed.

Administrative personnel includes: McElrath; James L. Barnhill, administrative assistant; Marie Baker and Charlotte Parker, secretaries; Mary F. Moore, director of guidance and federal programs; and Judy Ditto, secretary to Miss Moore.

Convention platform

Republicans to support equal rights

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Republican Platform Committee reversed a preliminary decision and voted to support the Equal Rights Amendment. Now it is under pressure to switch again in favor of tougher stances on such issues as the Panama Canal and diplomacy in Africa.

Ronald Reagan supporters and others dissatisfied with platform subcommittee actions on defense and foreign policy have their last chance to get their views into the document being drafted for the convention opening Monday. The draft platform must go to the printer today so delegates can have copies on arrival. The convention has the final say on the platform.

The committee has worked into the early morning twice to meet the deadline. A subcommittee decision to omit a call for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment — a platform fixture for 36 years — brought furious reaction from feminists and their supporters. The full committee voted 51 to 47 Thursday night to include the endorsement.

The committee voted to retain a statement supporting "the efforts of those who seek enactment of a constitutional amendment to restore protection of the right to life for unborn children."

Even after the abortion plank was nailed down, members continued to argue as to exactly what they had committed their party to do. Advocates of the plank said it is broad enough to accommodate the positions of both candidates. President Ford has said he opposes abortion but would leave the decisions to the states and Reagan has advocated an amendment against abortion in all but extreme cases.

Moderate and conservative Republicans shared successes Thursday.

The platform writers recommended consideration of ending federal aid to education and instead eliminating federal taxes on tobacco so the states could pick up that revenue, estimated at $2.3 billion annually.

They came out against busing children to schools on a basis of racial balance and for a constitutional amendment if needed to stop the practice.

Another constitutional amendment was proposed to allow local communities to have prayer in schools.

Compulsory registration of firearms was opposed in another plank.

The platform writers also opposed efforts to repeal the federal provision under which states may prohibit union shops, with workers required to join labor organizations.

They called for reform of the welfare system, with tougher regulations on food stamps.

Discussing taxes and government spending, the platform draft denounces the Humphrey-Hawkins bill pushed by Democrats as a way to put the unemployed into jobs, some at government expense.

The platform draft endorses tax changes to encourage investment, especially through employe stock plans and easier taxation of dividends.

Tax credits for expenses of college and technical education also won approval, as well as credits for private school costs.

Stark Manufacturing moves to Charleston

CHARLESTON — A new firm, Stark Manufacturing Co., has leased the former Charleston Fiberglass Co. plant in the Charleston Industrial Park, and plans to be producing brazed aluminum headers for the air conditioning industry within six months.

Dick Dawson, head of the company, signed the lease Thursday at the Chamber of Commerce office.

Dawson described the manufacturing operation as a "labor intensive" procedure, in which parts and tubes are connected and then the entire apparatus is placed in a furnace at 1,100 degrees to seal all the connections.

The manufacturer said he is in the process of buying equipment for the operation, and hopes to be moving it into the factory building by the end of the month.

Initial employment will be small—five to 10 persons—growing as the local operation progresses. Dawson put no upper limit on the ultimate size of the work force. Production could begin as early as four months from now, he said.

Dawson emphasized that no hiring will take place for the next couple of months, and said an announcement will be made later as to the time and place for prospective employes to sign up.

Dawson said he and his wife, Sally, hope to move to Charleston in "a couple of weeks". They are renting a house at 307 E. Commercial St.

Members of the Catholic Church, the Dawsons have two children, Bryan, age 3½, and Kate, 1. They are now living in Camdenton.

Dawson is a native of Wichita, Kan., and his wife is from California. He attended University of Kansas at Lawrence and has a degree in industrial management. He has been product manager of the Dawson Metal Products Co., a subsidiary of Sunstrand Air Comfort Products Co.

Convention protestors are protested

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The protesters camping out in Penn Valley Park for the start next week of the Republican National Convention are, themselves, being protested.

A group of Illinois Collegiate Young Republicans held a news conference Thursday to say the city should also allow them to camp out, or "run out the protesters who are sleeping there now."

"We have been given the runaround by city officials here when we try to get a permit for the park, and they're letting those people stay out there in the park illegally," said Richard Jensen of Zion, Ill.

Jensen, 20, said the Illinois Young Republicans were forced to impose on friends in Kansas City, Kan., for the duration of the convention.

"We don't understand why there is this double standard," said Todd Hertzberg of Winthrop Harbor, Ill., another spokesman for the visiting Young Republicans.

He and Jensen said they oppose governmental officials taking "a soft attitude toward protesters because they are afraid they might be going to do something violent if they don't."

Meanwhile, the Kansas City Convention Coalition of protesters laid down an ultimatum to city fathers, demanding portable comfort stations, or they will dig their own latrines at the park.

The city has rejected the coalition's demands, contending the park's two permanent facilities should suffice for now.

Al Brooks, assistant city manager, said Thursday the situation is being monitored daily to see if portable toilets are necessary.

In the meantime, some of the protesters have been making use of toilets at nearby Crown Center Hotel, where President Ford has a plush suite of rooms set aside for the convention.

Some, chanting, "We want water," gathered at the hotel entrance Thursday night after marching from Penn Valley Park, about two blocks away.

A spokesman asked permission of hotel officials to line up single file for use of the hotel's lobby drinking facilities. When refused, they resumed shouting and chanting, but did not block movement of hotel traffic or guests.

The ranks of protesters swelled to an estimated 100 Thursday, attracting a steady stream of sightseers in cars to observe the new park inhabitants.

One protester, a young woman who called herself Little Fawn, said she hitchhiked here from Colorado.

Missouri corn production is struggling through drought

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The cautious view state agriculture officials took a month ago at federal projections for record Missouri corn production proved wise as the latest production estimate has plummeted.

But while farmers struggle through the third drought in as many years, retail food prices should remain stable since the drought appears to have affected little else than Missouri.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture, releasing crop projections on Thursday based on field conditions as of Aug. 1, predicted drought-stricken Missouri fields will produce only 202 million bushels of corn, or 70 bushels an acre, "which reflects the effect of the extended dry weather in July."

That is down 43 million bushels, or 15 bushels an acre, from the July projection, and state officials believe it is still too high because of rainless days throughout the state until this week.

"I would say that the corn has been hurt additionally," said Bud Nelson of the Missouri Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, and J. W. Abbott of the state Agriculture Department added, "In my estimate it would be closer to a 50 to 55 bushel an acre yield than it would be to 70. I just don't think we've got that much corn out there."

The USDA also released its first estimate for the soybean crop, the other cash crop most Missouri farmers depend on. That projection was for only 108 million bushels, or 25 bushels an acre.

Crop outlook causes no change in prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department officials say the latest crop estimates give them no reason to change their current prediction that retail food prices will increase 3 to 4 per cent this year, compared with 8.5 per cent last year.

The August crop-production report that the Agriculture Department issued Thursday included a continued forecast as of Aug. 1 for a record corn crop of 6.19 billion bushels, 7 per cent above last year's mark.

Corn is the major ingredient of the feed for beef and dairy cattle, chickens, turkeys and hogs, the starting point for "big-ticket items" in the American grocery-buyer's shopping budget.

Such plentiful supplies of corn should mean "reasonable prices" for corn and other grain farmers, and more meat, eggs and dairy products available at moderate prices, according to Don Paarlberg, USDA's director of economics.

Paarlberg said growing conditions worsened during July in the upper Great Plains and the western Corn Belt, "but despite that, the crops that are growing out there are only a scratch below the previous record" for production of all U.S. crops.

Bernie to hold public hearing Aug. 27

BERNIE — A public hearing to discuss how the city could use a possible $400,000 federal grant, which had been scheduled Thursday night, was postponed until Aug. 27.

Mayor R.B. Woods said the reason for the delay was that the city did not have the announcement of the meeting advertised in a local paper as required by law.

East Prairie Schools will begin school year on Aug. 30

EAST PRAIRIE — Students in the East Prairie R-2 School District will begin the 1976-77 fall term at 8:15 a.m. Aug. 30 with a full day schedule, according to Supt. Gerald McElrath.

New students who have moved into the district since last year should register at their attendance center office before Aug. 25.

For the first time all schools will have a closed lunch hour and each student will be required to remain at school for the entire day. Lunches will be served the first day of school and arrangements—have been made for a cafeteria in the high school, where a type A lunch will be served. Cost of the school lunches daily for students will be: R.A. Doyle Elementary School, 30 cents; A.J. Martin Elementary School, 35 cents; and A.L. Webb Junior High and Senior High, 50 cents.

McElrath said it would be helpful to the school if parents could pay for lunches by the week instead of daily, saving time in collection of money and providing better planning of the number of meals served by the week.

Students whose family qualifies may apply for free or reduced-price lunches, and forms for making application will be available to each student at the beginning of their enrollment.

Bus routes will be approximately the same as last year, and anyone with questions about transportation is asked to call the bus garage at telephone number 649-2224.

Gayle Jackson to lead Calvary revival crusade

The Rev. Gayle Jackson

Evangelist Gayle Jackson of Sikeston will conduct a revival crusade beginning Tuesday night and continuing indefinitely at Calvary Assembly Church, 127 W. Trotter St. The services will begin at 7 p.m. and feature special singing as well as congregational singing and prayer for the sick, according to pastor T. A. McDonough.

The crusade will be an interdenominational meeting conducted by the Rev. Mr. Jackson who has been a full-time evangelist for many years and was featured by Life magazine along with Oral Roberts and Billy Graham as the three greatest evangelists in America.

A preacher since his conversion and "baptism in the Holy Spirit" at the age of 18, the Rev. Mr. Jackson feels he was called by the Lord to preach after attending a Holy Ghost meeting when he was only 6 years old.

As a young preacher still in his teens, he says he slept on benches under the tents the meetings were held in and ate watermelon up to three times a day for lack of money to do anything except conduct the meetings.

He recalls his first tent meeting was held in Memphis, Tenn., and says he thought about going back to school after high school, but the meetings became so successful he never stopped to attend seminary.

Although he has preached in many of America's largest cities and churches and in tent meetings to many thousands, the Rev. Mr. Jackson says he "would just as quickly go to a small church in the country if the Lord sent him."

Calvary Assembly provides a nursery for children 3 years old and under during each service.

Lay visit by Carter recalled

LOCK HAVEN, Pa. (AP)— "He knocked on doors asking people if they needed Jesus Christ as their personal savior. He never breathed to us he was a politician."

Mrs. Robert Farwell was reminiscing about Jimmy Carter. She remembered him as the evangelist who eight years ago trumpeted Christianity in this central Pennsylvania town.

It was in 1968 that Carter visited the Lock Haven area as a member of a six-man team of Southern Baptist laymen attempting to start a second Baptist church.

"He was the most humble and compassionate man my husband and I ever met," Mrs. Farwell, a widow of six months, said recently in a telephone interview. "He was a man who really loved the Lord Jesus Christ. You could feel it every minute you were around him."

The Baptist laymen remained two weeks, working in pairs and visiting 10 to 15 homes a day. Support for a second Baptist parish grew and eventually a new church was established.

For a time the new congregation was led by a divinity student from Texas, but he left. A permanent pastor was never found and the congregation dissolved and the new chruch closed.

Carter kept in touch with the Farwells after he returned to Georgia. He wrote them in December 1974, that he planned to run for president. It was a month later that he officially announced his candidacy.

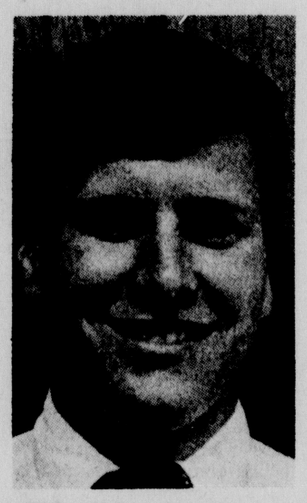
Elder Morgan Evans



Elder Edward Anderson

Elders Morgan Evans and Edward Anderson, a pair of 21-year-old missionaries for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, arrived in town about a week ago and will be doing door-to-door mission work in the Sikeston area for an indefinite period.

Evans, who is nearing the end of his voluntary two-year term with 22 months of missionary service behind him, hails from Springfield, Idaho, where he worked as a farmer to save money to pay his expenses while serving as a missionary.

Anderson is from LaMarque, Tex., and has served eight months of his two-year term. Prior to volunteering for mission work for the church, he attended Lamar University at Beaumont, Tex., for two years and did construction work to help raise money for living expenses during his missionary service.

While in the Sikeston area the young missionaries will call on homes door to door sharing their testimony about Christ and information about the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, which also is known as the Mormon Church.

The young men, who travel by bicycle, say they plan to work in several surrounding towns as well as Sikeston while staying in the area.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, headquartered in Salt Lake City, credits its tremendous growth to the successful missionary program through which thousands of young men (such as Evans and Anderson) and women voluntarily accept calls every year to become missionaries and work throughout the United States and most countries of the free world.

The missionaries serve the two years at their own expense or with the aid of friends and relatives, and when their service is completed, return to other pursuits.

Prior to coming to Sikeston, Evans' last assignment was in Hopkinsville, Ky., and Anderson was stationed at Lenoir City, Tenn. Anderson said they receive their assignmentsfrom the mission president stationed in Nashville, Tenn.

The Mormon Church was organized April 6, 1830 in Fayette Township, N.Y., under the direction of Joseph Smith, the first prophet and president of the church. Organization of the church followed by three years publication of the Book of Mormon, translated from metal plates Smith said he received possession of under divine inspiration and guidance by a heavenly messenger from a hill near Palmyra, N.Y.

The Book of Mormon contains the religious and secular history of various civilizations in ancient America between abut 2200 B.C. and 420 A.D., said to have been written by an ancient American prophet and historian named Mormon. Included in the volume is an account of the ministry of Jesus Christ on the American continent after his crucifixiion, resurrection and ascension in the Holy Land of the Old World.

At the end of his missionary term, Anderson plans to return to Lamar University and complete studies to become a civil engineer. Evans also plans to enter college, perhaps Brigham Young University at Salt Lake City.

Anderson's father, Thomas W. Anderson, is a civil engineer for the government. Other family memebers back home in La Marque include his mother and a younger sister and brother.

The youngest of five children and the only son, Evans' parents are Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Evans, and his father is a farmer.

When asked their reasons for volunteering two years of their lives for missionary service, Evans said his primary reason stemmed from a desire to "give others an opportunity to hear the fullness of the gospel of Christ," and Anderson remarked that it was mainly a desire to share the message of Christ and obedience to His command to "Go ye into the world."

The U.S. government operates the National Air Museum in Washington as a memorial to national aviation development. The exhibits include the Wright brothers' first airplane and Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis."

Thoughts

From The Living Bible

He was oppressed and he was afflicted, yet he never said a word. He was brought as a lamb to the slaughter; and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he stood silent before the ones condemning him. From prison and trial they led him away to his death. But who among the people of that day realized it was their sins that he was dying for—that he was suffering their punishment? He was buried like a criminal in a rich man's grave; but he had done no wrong.

No. 252. The Broken Jar

The Lord instructed Jeremiah to purchase a clay jar from a potter, and to take it out into the valley of the son of Hinnom near the east gate of the city. The prophet was also commanded to take with him some of the older priests and the elders and to speak to them whatever words were given him.

"Then shalt thou break the bottle in the sight of the men that go with thee. And shalt say unto them, Thus saith the Lord of hosts, Even so will I break this people, and this city as one breaketh a potter's vessel, that cannot be made whole again; and they shall bury them in Tophet, till there be no place to bury." (Jeremiah 19:10-11)

"And the houses of Jerusalem, and the houses of the kings of Judah, shall be defiled as the place of Tophet, because of all the houses upon whose roofs they have burned incense unto all the host of heaven, and have poured out drink offerings unto other gods." (Jeremiah 19: 13)

Gayle Jackson to lead Calvary revival crusade

Evangelist Gayle Jackson of Sikeston will conduct a revival crusade beginning Tuesday night and continuing indefinitely at Calvary Assembly Church, 127 W. Trotter St. The services will begin at 7 p.m. and feature special singing as well as congregational singing and prayer for the sick, according to pastor T. A. McDonough.

The crusade will be an interdenominational meeting conducted by the Rev. Mr. Jackson who has been a full-time evangelist for many years and was featured by Life magazine along with Oral Roberts and Billy Graham as the three greatest evangelists in America.

The Rev. Gayle Jackson

A preacher since his conversion and "baptism in the Holy Spirit" at the age of 18, the Rev. Mr. Jackson feels he was called by the Lord to preach after attending a Holy Ghost meeting when he was only 6 years old.

As a young preacher still in his teens, he says he slept on benches under the tents the meetings were held in and ate watermelon up to three times a day for lack of money to do anything except conduct the meetings.

He recalls his first tent meeting was held in Memphis, Tenn., and says he thought about going back to school after high school, but the meetings became so successful he never stopped to attend seminary.

Although he has preached in many of America's largest cities and churches and in tent meetings to many thousands, the Rev. Mr. Jackson says he "would just as quickly go to a small church in the country if the Lord sent him."

Calvary Assembly provides a nursery for children 3 years old and under during each service.

Lay visit by Carter recalled

LOCK HAVEN, Pa. (AP)— "He knocked on doors asking people if they needed Jesus Christ as their personal savior. He never breathed to us he was a politician."

Mrs. Robert Farwell was reminiscing about Jimmy Carter. She remembered him as the evangelist who eight years ago trumpeted Christianity in this central Pennsylvania town.

It was in 1968 that Carter visited the Lock Haven area as a member of a six-man team of Southern Baptist laymen attempting to start a second Baptist church.

"He was the most humble and compassionate man my husband and I ever met," Mrs. Farwell, a widow of six months, said recently in a telephone interview. "He was a man who really loved the Lord Jesus Christ. You could feel it every minute you were around him."

The Baptist laymen remained two weeks, working in pairs and visiting 10 to 15 homes a day. Support for a second Baptist parish grew and eventually a new church was established.

For a time the new congregation was led by a divinity student from Texas, but he left. A permanent pastor was never found and the congregation dissolved and the new chruch closed.

Carter kept in touch with the Farwells after he returned to Georgia. He wrote them in December 1974, that he planned to run for president. It was a month later that he officially announced his candidacy.

Young Mormon elders in area doing mission work

Elders Morgan Evans and Edward Anderson, a pair of 21-year-old missionaries for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, arrived in town about a week ago and will be doing door-to-door mission work in the Sikeston area for an indefinite period.

Evans, who is nearing the end of his voluntary two-year term with 22 months of missionary service behind him, hails from Springfield, Idaho, where he worked as a farmer to save money to pay his expenses while serving as a missionary.

Anderson is from LaMarque, Tex., and has served eight months of his two-year term. Prior to volunteering for mission work for the church, he attended Lamar University at Beaumont, Tex., for two years and did construction work to help raise money for living expenses during his missionary service.

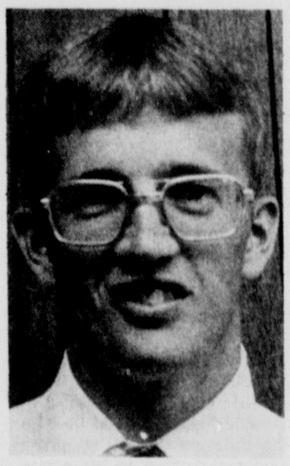
While in the Sikeston area the young missionaries will call on homes door to door sharing their testimony about Christ and information about the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, which also is known as the Mormon Church.

The young men, who travel by bicycle, say they plan to work in several surrounding towns as well as Sikeston while staying in the area.

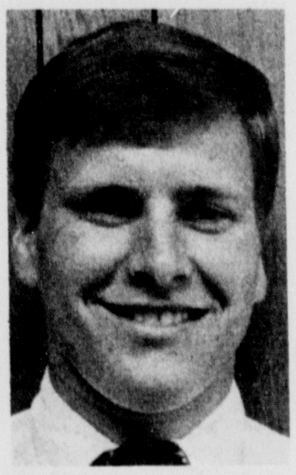
The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, headquartered in Salt Lake City, credits its tremendous growth to the successful missionary program through which thousands of young men (such as Evans and Anderson) and women voluntarily accept calls every year to become missionaries and work throughout the United States and most countries of the free world.

The missionaries serve the two years at their own expense or with the aid of friends and relatives, and when their service is completed, return to other pursuits.

Prior to coming to Sikeston, Evans' last assignment was in Hopkinsville, Ky., and Anderson was stationed at Lenoir City, Tenn. Anderson said they receive their assignmentsfrom the mission president stationed in Nashville, Tenn.



Elder Morgan Evans



Elder Edward Anderson

The Mormon Church was organized April 6, 1830 in Fayette Township, N.Y., under the direction of Joseph Smith, the first prophet and president of the church. Organization of the church followed by three years publication of the Book of Mormon, translated from metal plates Smith said he received possession of under divine inspiration and guidance by a heavenly messenger from a hill near Palmyra, N.Y.

The Book of Mormon contains the religious and secular history of various civilizations in ancient America between abut 2200 B.C. and 420 A.D., said to have been written by an ancient American prophet and historian named Mormon. Included in the volume is an account of the ministry of Jesus Christ on the American continent after his crucifixiion, resurrection and ascension in the Holy Land of the Old World.

At the end of his missionary term, Anderson plans to return to Lamar University and complete studies to become a civil engineer. Evans also plans to enter college, perhaps Brigham Young University at Salt Lake City.

Anderson's father, Thomas W. Anderson, is a civil engineer for the government. Other family memebers back home in La Marque include his mother and a younger sister and brother.

The youngest of five children and the only son, Evans' parents are Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Evans, and his father is a farmer.

When asked their reasons for volunteering two years of their lives for missionary service, Evans said his primary reason stemmed from a desire to "give others an opportunity to hear the fullness of the gospel of Christ," and Anderson remarked that it was mainly a desire to share the message of Christ and obedience to His command to "Go ye into the world."

The U.S. government operates the National Air Museum in Washington as a memorial to national aviation development. The exhibits include the Wright brothers' first airplane and Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis."

Thoughts

From The Living Bible

He was oppressed and he was afflicted, yet he never said a word. He was brought as a lamb to the slaughter; and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he stood silent before the ones condemning him. From prison and trial they led him away to his death. But who among the people of that day realized it was their sins that he was dying for—that he was suffering their punishment? He was buried like a criminal in a rich man's grave; but he had done no wrong.

Convention platform

Republicans to support equal rights

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Republican Platform Committee reversed a preliminary decision and voted to support the Equal Rights Amendment. Now it is under pressure to switch again in favor of tougher stances on such issues as the Panama Canal and diplomacy in Africa.

Ronald Reagan supporters and others dissatisfied with platform subcommittee actions on defense and foreign policy have their last chance to get their views into the document being drafted for the convention opening Monday. The draft platform must go to the printer today so delegates can have copies on arrival. The convention has the final say on the platform.

The committee has worked into the early morning twice to meet the deadline. A subcommittee decision to omit a call for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment — a platform fixture for 36 years — brought furious reaction from feminists and their supporters. The full committee voted 51 to 47 Thursday night to include the endorsement.

The committee voted to retain a statement supporting "the efforts of those who seek enactment of a constitutional amendment to restore protection of the right to life for unborn children."

Even after the abortion plank was nailed down, members continued to argue as to exactly what they had committed their party to do. Advocates of the plank said it is broad enough to accommodate the positions of both candidates. President Ford has said he opposes abortion but would leave the decisions to the states and Reagan has advocated an amendment against abortion in all but extreme cases.

Moderate and conservative Republicans shared successes Thursday.

The platform writers recommended consideration of ending federal aid to education and instead eliminating federal taxes on tobacco so the states could pick up that revenue, estimated at $2.3 billion annually.

They came out against busing children to schools on a basis of racial balance and for a constitutional amendment if needed to stop the practice.

Another constitutional amendment was proposed to allow local communities to have prayer in schools.

Compulsory registration of firearms was opposed in another plank.

The platform writers also opposed efforts to repeal the federal provision under which states may prohibit union shops, with workers required to join labor organizations.

They called for reform of the welfare system, with tougher regulations on food stamps.

Discussing taxes and government spending, the platform draft denounces the Humphrey-Hawkins bill pushed by Democrats as a way to put the unemployed into jobs, some at government expense.

The platform draft endorses tax changes to encourage investment, especially through employe stock plans and easier taxation of dividends.

Tax credits for expenses of college and technical education also won approval, as well as credits for private school costs.

Convention protestors are protested

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The protesters camping out in Penn Valley Park for the start next week of the Republican National Convention are, themselves, being protested.

A group of Illinois Collegiate Young Republicans held a news conference Thursday to say the city should also allow them to camp out, or "run out the protesters who are sleeping there now."

"We have been given the runaround by city officials here when we try to get a permit for the park, and they're letting those people stay out there in the park illegally," said Richard Jensen of Zion, Ill.

Jensen, 20, said the Illinois Young Republicans were forced to impose on friends in Kansas City, Kan., for the duration of the convention.

"We don't understand why there is this double standard," said Todd Hertzberg of Winthrop Harbor, Ill., another spokesman for the visiting Young Republicans.

He and Jensen said they oppose governmental officials taking "a soft attitude toward protesters because they are afraid they might be going to do something violent if they don't."

Meanwhile, the Kansas City Convention Coalition of protesters laid down an ultimatum to city fathers, demanding portable comfort stations, or they will dig their own latrines at the park.

The city has rejected the coalition's demands, contending the park's two permanent facilities should suffice for now.

Al Brooks, assistant city manager, said Thursday the situation is being monitored daily to see if portable toilets are necessary.

In the meantime, some of the protesters have been making use of toilets at nearby Crown Center Hotel, where President Ford has a plush suite of rooms set aside for the convention.

Some, chanting, "We want water," gathered at the hotel entrance Thursday night after marching from Penn Valley Park, about two blocks away.

A spokesman asked permission of hotel officials to line up single file for use of the hotel's lobby drinking facilities. When refused, they resumed shouting and chanting, but did not block movement of hotel traffic or guests.

The ranks of protesters swelled to an estimated 100 Thursday, attracting a steady stream of sightseers in cars to observe the new park inhabitants.

One protester, a young woman who called herself Little Fawn, said she hitchhiked here from Colorado.

Missouri corn production is struggling through drought

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The cautious view state agriculture officials took a month ago at federal projections for record Missouri corn production proved wise as the latest production estimate has plummeted.

But while farmers struggle through the third drought in as many years, retail food prices should remain stable since the drought appears to have affected little else than Missouri.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture, releasing crop projections on Thursday based on field conditions as of Aug. 1, predicted drought-stricken Missouri fields will produce only 202 million bushels of corn, or 70 bushels an acre, "which reflects the effect of the extended dry weather in July."

That is down 43 million bushels, or 15 bushels an acre, from the July projection, and state officials believe it is still too high because of rainless days throughout the state until this week.

"I would say that the corn has been hurt additionally," said Bud Nelson of the Missouri Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, and J. W. Abbott of the state Agriculture Department added, "In my estimate it would be closer to a 50 to 55 bushel an acre yield than it would be to 70. I just don't think we've got that much corn out there."

The USDA also released its first estimate for the soybean crop, the other cash crop most Missouri farmers depend on. That projection was for only 108 million bushels, or 25 bushels an acre.

Crop outlook causes no change in prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department officials say the latest crop estimates give them no reason to change their current prediction that retail food prices will increase 3 to 4 per cent this year, compared with 8.5 per cent last year.

The August crop-production report that the Agriculture Department issued Thursday included a continued forecast as of Aug. 1 for a record corn crop of 6.19 billion bushels, 7 per cent above last year's mark.

Corn is the major ingredient of the feed for beef and dairy cattle, chickens, turkeys and hogs, the starting point for "big-ticket items" in the American grocery-buyer's shopping budget.

Such plentiful supplies of corn should mean "reasonable prices" for corn and other grain farmers, and more meat, eggs and dairy products available at moderate prices, according to Don Paarlberg, USDA's director of economics.

Paarlberg said growing conditions worsened during July in the upper Great Plains and the western Corn Belt, "but despite that, the crops that are growing out there are only a scratch below the previous record" for production of all U.S. crops.

Stark Manufacturing moves to Charleston

CHARLESTON — A new firm, Stark Manufacturing Co., has leased the former Charleston Fiberglass Co. plant in the Charleston Industrial Park, and plans to be producing brazed aluminum headers for the air conditioning industry within six months.

Dick Dawson, head of the company, signed the lease Thursday at the Chamber of Commerce office.

Dawson described the manufacturing operation as a "labor intensive" procedure, in which parts and tubes are connected and then the entire apparatus is placed in a furnace at 1,100 degrees to seal all the connections.

The manufacturer said he is in the process of buying equipment for the operation, and hopes to be moving it into the factory building by the end of the month.

Initial employment will be small—five to 10 persons—growing as the local operation progresses. Dawson put no upper limit on the ultimate size of the work force. Production could begin as early as four months from now, he said.

Dawson emphasized that no hiring will take place for the next couple of months, and said an announcement will be made later as to the time and place for prospective employes to sign up.

Dawson said he and his wife, Sally, hope to move to Charleston in "a couple of weeks". They are renting a house at 307 E. Commercial St.

Members of the Catholic Church, the Dawsons have two children, Bryan, age 3½, and Kate, 1. They are now living in Camdenton.

Dawson is a native of Wichita, Kan., and his wife is from California. He attended University of Kansas at Lawrence and has a degree in industrial management. He has been product manager of the Dawson Metal Products Co., a subsidiary of Sunstrand Air Comfort Products Co.

Bernie to hold public hearing Aug. 27

BERNIE — A public hearing to discuss how the city could use a possible $400,000 federal grant, which had been scheduled Thursday night, was postponed until Aug. 27.

Mayor R.B. Woods said the reason for the delay was that the city did not have the announcement of the meeting advertised in a local paper as required by law.

East Prairie Schools will begin school year on Aug. 30

Convention platform

Republicans to support equal rights

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Republican Platform Committee reversed a preliminary decision and voted to support the Equal Rights Amendment. Now it is under pressure to switch again in favor of tougher stances on such issues as the Panama Canal and diplomacy in Africa.

Ronald Reagan supporters and others dissatisfied with platform subcommittee actions on defense and foreign policy have their last chance to get their views into the document being drafted for the convention opening Monday. The draft platform must go to the printer today so delegates can have copies on arrival. The convention has the final say on the platform.

The committee has worked into the early morning twice to meet the deadline. A subcommittee decision to omit a call for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment — a platform fixture for 36 years — brought furious reaction from feminists and their supporters. The full committee voted 51 to 47 Thursday night to include the endorsement.

The committee voted to retain a statement supporting "the efforts of those who seek enactment of a constitutional amendment to restore protection of the right to life for unborn children."

Even after the abortion plank was nailed down, members continued to argue as to exactly what they had committed their party to do. Advocates of the plank said it is broad enough to accommodate the positions of both candidates. President Ford has said he opposes abortion but would leave the decisions to the states and Reagan has advocated an amendment against abortion in all but extreme cases.

Moderate and conservative Republicans shared successes Thursday.

The platform writers recommended consideration of ending federal aid to education and instead eliminating federal taxes on tobacco so the states could pick up that revenue, estimated at $2.3 billion annually.

They came out against busing children to schools on a basis of racial balance and for a constitutional amendment if needed to stop the practice.

Another constitutional amendment was proposed to allow local communities to have prayer in schools.

Compulsory registration of firearms was opposed in another plank.

The platform writers also opposed efforts to repeal the federal provision under which states may prohibit union shops, with workers required to join labor organizations.

They called for reform of the welfare system, with tougher regulations on food stamps.

Discussing taxes and government spending, the platform draft denounces the Humphrey-Hawkins bill pushed by Democrats as a way to put the unemployed into jobs, some at government expense.

The platform draft endorses tax changes to encourage investment, especially through employe stock plans and easier taxation of dividends.

Tax credits for expenses of college and technical education also won approval, as well as credits for private school costs.

Convention protestors are protested

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The protesters camping out in Penn Valley Park for the start next week of the Republican National Convention are, themselves, being protested.

A group of Illinois Collegiate Young Republicans held a news conference Thursday to say the city should also allow them to camp out, or "run out the protesters who are sleeping there now."

"We have been given the runaround by city officials here when we try to get a permit for the park, and they're letting those people stay out there in the park illegally," said Richard Jensen of Zion, Ill.

Jensen, 20, said the Illinois Young Republicans were forced to impose on friends in Kansas City, Kan., for the duration of the convention.

"We don't understand why there is this double standard," said Todd Hertzberg of Winthrop Harbor, Ill., another spokesman for the visiting Young Republicans.

He and Jensen said they oppose governmental officials taking "a soft attitude toward protesters because they are afraid they might be going to do something violent if they don't."

Meanwhile, the Kansas City Convention Coalition of protesters laid down an ultimatum to city fathers, demanding portable comfort stations, or they will dig their own latrines at the park.

The city has rejected the coalition's demands, contending the park's two permanent facilities should suffice for now.

Al Brooks, assistant city manager, said Thursday the situation is being monitored daily to see if portable toilets are necessary.

In the meantime, some of the protesters have been making use of toilets at nearby Crown Center Hotel, where President Ford has a plush suite of rooms set aside for the convention.

Some, chanting, "We want water," gathered at the hotel entrance Thursday night after marching from Penn Valley Park, about two blocks away.

A spokesman asked permission of hotel officials to line up single file for use of the hotel's lobby drinking facilities. When refused, they resumed shouting and chanting, but did not block movement of hotel traffic or guests.

The ranks of protesters swelled to an estimated 100 Thursday, attracting a steady stream of sightseers in cars to observe the new park inhabitants.

One protester, a young woman who called herself Little Fawn, said she hitchhiked here from Colorado.

Missouri corn production is struggling through drought

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The cautious view state agriculture officials took a month ago at federal projections for record Missouri corn production proved wise as the latest production estimate has plummeted.

But while farmers struggle through the third drought in as many years, retail food prices should remain stable since the drought appears to have affected little else than Missouri.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture, releasing crop projections on Thursday based on field conditions as of Aug. 1, predicted drought-stricken Missouri fields will produce only 202 million bushels of corn, or 70 bushels an acre, "which reflects the effect of the extended dry weather in July."

That is down 43 million bushels, or 15 bushels an acre, from the July projection, and state officials believe it is still too high because of rainless days throughout the state until this week.

"I would say that the corn has been hurt additionally," said Bud Nelson of the Missouri Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, and J. W. Abbott of the state Agriculture Department added, "In my estimate it would be closer to a 50 to 55 bushel an acre yield than it would be to 70. I just don't think we've got that much corn out there."

The USDA also released its first estimate for the soybean crop, the other cash crop most Missouri farmers depend on. That projection was for only 108 million bushels, or 25 bushels an acre.

Stark Manufacturing moves to Charleston

CHARLESTON — A new firm, Stark Manufacturing Co., has leased the former Charleston Fiberglass Co. plant in the Charleston Industrial Park, and plans to be producing brazed aluminum headers for the air conditioning industry within six months.

Dick Dawson, head of the company, signed the lease Thursday at the Chamber of Commerce office.

Dawson described the manufacturing operation as a "labor intensive" procedure, in which parts and tubes are connected and then the entire apparatus is placed in a furnace at 1,100 degrees to seal all the connections.

The manufacturer said he is in the process of buying equipment for the operation, and hopes to be moving it into the factory building by the end of the month.

Initial employment will be small—five to 10 persons—growing as the local operation progresses. Dawson put no upper limit on the ultimate size of the work force. Production could begin as early as four months from now, he said.

Dawson emphasized that no hiring will take place for the next couple of months, and said an announcement will be made later as to the time and place for prospective employes to sign up.

Dawson said he and his wife, Sally, hope to move to Charleston in "a couple of weeks". They are renting a house at 307 E. Commercial St.

Members of the Catholic Church, the Dawsons have two children, Bryan, age 3½, and Kate, 1. They are now living in Camdenton.

Dawson is a native of Wichita, Kan., and his wife is from California. He attended University of Kansas at Lawrence and has a degree in industrial management. He has been product manager of the Dawson Metal Products Co., a subsidiary of Sunstrand Air Comfort Products Co.

Crop outlook causes no change in prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department officials say the latest crop estimates give them no reason to change their current prediction that retail food prices will increase 3 to 4 per cent this year, compared with 8.5 per cent last year.

The August crop-production report that the Agriculture Department issued Thursday included a continued forecast as of Aug. 1 for a record corn crop of 6.19 billion bushels, 7 per cent above last year's mark.

Corn is the major ingredient of the feed for beef and dairy cattle, chickens, turkeys and hogs, the starting point for "big-ticket items" in the American grocery-buyer's shopping budget.

Such plentiful supplies of corn should mean "reasonable prices" for corn and other grain farmers, and more meat, eggs and dairy products available at moderate prices, according to Don Paarlberg, USDA's director of economics.

Paarlberg said growing conditions worsened during July in the upper Great Plains and the western Corn Belt, "but despite that, the crops that are growing out there are only a scratch below the previous record" for production of all U.S. crops.

Bernie to hold public hearing Aug. 27

BERNIE — A public hearing to discuss how the city could use a possible $400,000 federal grant, which had been scheduled Thursday night, was postponed until Aug. 27.

Mayor R.B. Woods said the reason for the delay was that the city did not have the announcement of the meeting advertised in a local paper as required by law.

Gayle Jackson to lead Calvary revival crusade

Evangelist Gayle Jackson of Sikeston will conduct a revival crusade beginning Tuesday night and continuing indefinitely at Calvary Assembly Church, 127 W. Trotter St. The services will begin at 7 p.m. and feature special singing as well as congregational singing and prayer for the sick, according to pastor T. A. McDonough.

The crusade will be an interdenominational meeting conducted by the Rev. Mr. Jackson who has been a full-time evangelist for many years and was featured by Life magazine along with Oral Roberts and Billy Graham as the three greatest evangelists in America.

A preacher since his conversion and "baptism in the Holy Spirit" at the age of 18, the Rev. Mr. Jackson feels he was called by the Lord to preach after attending a Holy Ghost meeting when he was only 6 years old.

As a young preacher still in his teens, he says he slept on benches under the tents the meetings were held in and ate watermelon up to three times a day for lack of money to do anything except conduct the meetings.

He recalls his first tent meeting was held in Memphis,

The Rev. Gayle Jackson

Tenn., and says he thought about going back to school after high school, but the meetings became so successful he never stopped to attend seminary.

Although he has preached in many of America's largest cities and churches and in tent meetings to many thousands, the Rev. Mr. Jackson says he "would just as quickly go to a small church in the country if the Lord sent him."

Calvary Assembly provides a nursery for children 3 years old and under during each service.

Lay visit by Carter recalled

LOCK HAVEN, Pa. (AP)— "He knocked on doors asking people if they needed Jesus Christ as their personal savior. He never breathed to us he was a politician."

Mrs. Robert Farwell was reminiscing about Jimmy Carter. She remembered him as the evangelist who eight years ago trumpeted Christianity in this central Pennsylvania town.

It was in 1968 that Carter visited the Lock Haven area as a member of a six-man team of Southern Baptist laymen attempting to start a second Baptist church.

"He was the most humble and compassionate man my husband and I ever met," Mrs. Farwell, a widow of six months, said recently in a telephone interview. "He was a man who really loved the Lord Jesus Christ. You could feel it every minute you were around him."

The Baptist laymen remained two weeks, working in pairs and visiting 10 to 15 homes a day. Support for a second Baptist parish grew and eventually a new church was established.

For a time the new congregation was led by a divinity student from Texas, but he left. A permanent pastor was never found and the congregation dissolved and the new chruch closed.

Carter kept in touch with the Farwells after he returned to Georgia. He wrote them in December 1974, that he planned to run for president. It was a month later that he officially announced his candidacy.

Young Mormon elders in area doing mission work

Elders Morgan Evans and Edward Anderson, a pair of 21-year-old missionaries for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, arrived in town about a week ago and will be doing door-to-door mission work in the Sikeston area for an indefinite period.

Evans, who is nearing the end of his voluntary two-year term with 22 months of missionary service behind him, hails from Springfield, Idaho, where he worked as a farmer to save money to pay his expenses while serving as a missionary.

Anderson is from LaMarque, Tex., and has served eight months of his two-year term. Prior to volunteering for mission work for the church, he attended Lamar University at Beaumont, Tex., for two years and did construction work to help raise money for living expenses during his missionary service.

While in the Sikeston area the young missionaries will call on homes door to door sharing their testimony about Christ and information about the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, which also is known as the Mormon Church.

The young men, who travel by bicycle, say they plan to work in several surrounding towns as well as Sikeston while staying in the area.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, headquartered in Salt Lake City, credits its tremendous growth to the successful missionary program through which thousands of young men (such as Evans and Anderson) and women voluntarily accept calls every year to become missionaries and work throughout the United States and most countries of the free world.

The missionaries serve the two years at their own expense or with the aid of friends and relatives, and when their service is completed, return to other pursuits.

Prior to coming to Sikeston, Evans' last assignment was in Hopkinsville, Ky., and Anderson was stationed at Lenoir City, Tenn. Anderson said they receive their assignmentsfrom

The Mormon Church was organized April 6, 1830 in Fayette Township, N.Y., under the direction of Joseph Smith, the first prophet and president of the church. Organization of the church followed by three years publication of the Book of Mormon, translated from metal plates Smith said he received possession of under divine inspiration and guidance by a heavenly messenger from a hill near Palmyra, N.Y.

The Book of Mormon contains the religious and secular history of various civilizations in ancient America between abut 2200 B.C. and 420 A.D., said to have been written by an ancient American prophet and historian named Mormon. Included in the volume is an account of the ministry of Jesus Christ on the American continent after his crucifixiion, resurrection and ascension in the Holy Land of the Old World.

At the end of his missionary term, Anderson plans to return to Lamar University and complete studies to become a civil engineer. Evans also plans to enter college, perhaps Brigham Young University at Salt Lake City.

Anderson's father, Thomas W. Anderson, is a civil engineer for the government. Other family memebers back home in La Marque include his mother and a younger sister and brother.

The youngest of five children and the only son, Evans' parents are Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Evans, and his father is a farmer.

When asked their reasons for volunteering two years of their lives for missionary service, Evans said his primary reason stemmed from a desire to "give others an opportunity to hear the fullness of the gospel of Christ," and Anderson remarked that it was mainly a desire to share the message of Christ and obedience to His command to "Go ye into the world."

The U.S. government operates the National Air Museum in Washington as a memorial to national aviation development. The exhibits include the Wright brothers' first airplane and Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis."

Thoughts

From The Living Bible

He was oppressed and he was afflicted, yet he never said a word. He was brought as a lamb to the slaughter; and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he stood silent before the ones condemning him. From prison and trial they led him away to his death. But who among the people of that day realized it was their sins that he was dying for—that he was suffering their punishment? He was buried like a criminal in a rich man's grave; but he had done no wrong.

No. 252. The Broken Jar

The Lord instructed Jeremiah to purchase a clay jar from a potter, and to take it out into the valley of the son of Hinnom near the east gate of the city. The prophet was also commanded to take with him some of the older priests and the elders and to speak to them whatever words were given him.

"Then shalt thou break the bottle in the sight of the men that go with thee. And shalt say unto them, Thus saith the Lord of hosts, Even so will I break this people, and this city as one breaketh a potter's vessel, that cannot be made whole again; and they shall bury them in Tophet, till there be no place to bury." (Jeremiah 19:10-11)

"And the houses of Jerusalem, and the houses of the kings of Judah, shall be defiled as the place of Tophet, because of all the houses upon whose roofs they have burned incense unto all the host of heaven, and have poured out drink offerings unto other gods." (Jeremiah 19: 13)

Gayle Jackson to lead Calvary revival crusade

Evangelist Gayle Jackson of Sikeston will conduct a revival crusade beginning Tuesday night and continuing indefinitely at Calvary Assembly Church, 127 W. Trotter St. The services will begin at 7 p.m. and feature special singing as well as congregational singing and prayer for the sick, according to pastor T. A. McDonough.

The crusade will be an interdenominational meeting conducted by the Rev. Mr. Jackson who has been a full-time evangelist for many years and was featured by Life magazine along with Oral Roberts and Billy Graham as the three greatest evangelists in America.

The Rev. Gayle Jackson

A preacher since his conversion and "baptism in the Holy Spirit" at the age of 18, the Rev. Mr. Jackson feels he was called by the Lord to preach after attending a Holy Ghost meeting when he was only 6 years old.

As a young preacher still in his teens, he says he slept on benches under the tents the meetings were held in and ate watermelon up to three times a day for lack of money to do anything except conduct the meetings.

He recalls his first tent meeting was held in Memphis, Tenn., and says he thought about going back to school after high school, but the meetings became so successful he never stopped to attend seminary.

Although he has preached in many of America's largest cities and churches and in tent meetings to many thousands, the Rev. Mr. Jackson says he "would just as quickly go to a small church in the country if the Lord sent him."

Calvary Assembly provides a nursery for children 3 years old and under during each service.

Public Pensions Part IV

Solutions for pension funds must come from cities, states

Associated Press Writer

The cures for public pension funds that promise workers more than taxpayers can afford will have to come from the cities and states themselves. The search for solutions at the federal level is floundering.

Since the New York City crisis brought to light the pension problems of many cities and states, officials have tried to identify the nation's trouble spots.

A recent study by the brokerage firm of Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., for instance, concluded that five state-administered pension systems "appear to be underfunded to a significant degree." That means the state governments have made pension promises to its employes, but haven't faced up to the costs. Nor have they been willing or able to put aside the necessary cash to pay the future costs.

The states named in the study are Illinois, with an unfunded pension debt of $2.99 billion; Massachusetts with $7.4 billion; Connecticut with $2.1 billion; Michigan with $1.9 billion; and Florida with $1.8 billion.

Among city pension systems with giant unfunded pension debts are New York, where five plans have an estimated $8 billion in unfunded liabilities, and Washington, D.C., where three plans are unfunded by $1.8 billion. The Los Angeles City Fire and Police Pension System has unfunded liabilities of $1.69 billion.

Other city systems such as those in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh are facing pension problems, but no one really knows how many of the more than 6,000 public plans across the country might be headed for trouble.

Where problems do exist, experts believe the solutions lie in successfully answering several questions:

—What is the pension supposed to do for the worker?

—What will the city or state's pension promises cost future and present taxpayers?

—If the cost is too high, what can be done to control it?

The first question of what a pension is supposed to do is subject to disagreement.

In recent congressional testimony, Bernard Jump and Edward Cupoli of Syracuse University said: "Some would argue that a pension is merely a form of deferred compensation and should be evaluated accordingly. Some view pensions, or more precisely, extraordinarily large pensions after comparatively short service — as in the case of police and fire fighters — as rewards for hazardous work."

The two men said they disagreed with both views and accepted the position put forth by New York's Permanent Commission on Public Employe Pension and Retirement Systems which said: "The career public employe — the individual who devoted a working lifetime of 30 or more years to public service — should be guaranteed at normal retirement age an income which will allow him to maintain his pre-retirement standard of living."

The step of instituting benefit or contribution changes can be painful, costly and politically difficult for the city or state.

Massachusetts, whose 100 state-administered pension plans have always been on a pay-as-you-go basis, had to start from scratch in its search for solutions.

In 1974, the Massachusetts Retirement Law Commission identified a $7.4 billion unfunded pension liability in the state system. At that time, the state had appropriated $260 million in tax dollars to cover pension costs. A year later, costs shot up to $400 million. The commission estimated that $810 million a year for the next 40 years would be needed to put the state systems on a rational financial basis.

Commission Chairman Carmen Elio said one factor contributing to the problem was a cost-of-living provision fully matching each annual boost in the inflation rate. That provision contributed to an annual growth rate of about 30 per cent in the last five years, according to Elio.

The state legislature finally agreed to what amounted to a moratorium on new benefit increases until the commission could evaluate any boosts.

The commission created a databank of information on the state's active and retired employes which permitted the first systematic study of state pensions since 1946. The study found that 30 years ago, half of a worker's pension cost was funded by the employe's contribution of 5 per cent of his or her annual salary.

Today, the 5 per cent contribution finances only 10 to 15 per cent of the pension cost and the taxpayer must provide the rest.

Legislative proposals were made earlier this year to fund the plan more properly, but they were shunted aside and are considered dead for the rest of the year, largely because the state's general finances have been in difficulty lately.

What makes the choice between proper and improper funding of pensions so difficult is that improper funding is cheaper in the short run. Places like Massachusetts and Washington, D.C., simply budget enough money each year to cover the cost of current retirees.

The problem begins when the pension system "matures" — when a large and larger percentage of participants retire and a smaller and smaller number are left to pay the bill. If the benefits are increased and if cost-of-living adjustments are provided, the strain is compounded. If funds are not set aside each year to provide for these future cost increases, the pension costs will begin to rise sharply.

This already is happening in Washington. A study of the city's systems by Cedric W. Kroll, government actuary for the U.S. Treasury secretary, showed that properly funding the plans would cost the city more than 150 per cent of the current payroll costs immediately. The figure would decline to 60 per cent over the next 40 years.

Even less severe solutions would involve city pension contributions of 72.2 per cent a year of the total payroll indefinitely. If Washington, D.C., does nothing to change its current funding practices, Kroll says the costs will mount steadily to close to 100 per cent of payroll by the year 2000 and will hold there indefinitely.

Beyond acceptance of the principle of proper funding, local pension systems can take a number of general steps to ease their problems, says pension expert Robert Tilove.

The most important step is to integrate benefits paid by the local plan with those from Social Security. This would involve fixing a certain percentage of final salary as a "fair" pension. Social Security and the local pension added together would not be permitted to exceed this percentage.

Since Social Security benefits have been rising so rapidly — about 93.6 per cent in the last six years alone — integration with the local pension plan could relieve a large chunk of the benefit burden.

It also would be a means of cutting back for future employes the generous benefits offered in places like New York City and Philadelphia where workers get both Social Security and a pension.

Another step many states have taken in recent years is consolidation of all local pension plans under a single administrative body, answerable only to the state legislature. This has been done, for instance, in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Illinois. The main benefits from consolidation are a considerable administrative saving and generally better expertise in management of the pension funds.

Some states require that the full present and future cost of any proposed pension increase be calculated and disclosed before the legislature approves it. Ohio, whose systems are among the best financed in the nation, has such a law. As a double check, a special state commission evaluates the health of Ohio's state plans at least once every five years.

Tilove and others have suggested a number of new federal laws, including one abolishing the loophole in the Social Security laws making membership in the system optional for state and local government bodies.

But the outlook for any federal action is bleak, according to congressional staffers working on the problem.

A recent Supreme Court ruling that the federal wage law did not apply to city and state employes was widely interpreted as damaging to federal efforts to regulate local pension plans.

In addition, the Municipal Finance Officers Association, representing state and local finance officers, voiced strong opposition to a House bill aimed at imposing reporting and disclosure regulations on local pension administrators.

Wing-walking, an unforgettable way to get fresh air

DETROIT (AP) — Wing-walking is an unforgettable way to get a big breath of fresh air.

It's like standing on top of a ladder while somebody shakes the legs. But the ladder is high enough to reach the windows of an 80-story building — and sways.

It seems easy when you watch 22-year-old Steve Trevor, a soft-spoken premed student at the University of California in Irvine, dangling from the wing by his hands and feet and turning upside down as part of his regular act.

The pilot of the act, Joe C. Hughes, 44, of Huntington Beach, Calif., said of Trenor: "I know every one of his moves. If anything ever goes wrong, I'll pull back the stick (sending the plane into a vertical climb) and he'll fall into the cockpit."

Trevor says that standing on his head on the wing of a twirling, looping biplane is "relaxing."

Relaxing? Not exactly, in the opinion of a reporter who is more accustomed to sitting at a typewriter than standing on the wing of a bouncing plane.

The first lesson is that before you learn to wing-walk you must learn to wing-crawl, which you do by clambering through a maze of wires and struts to the top wing of Hughes' red and white biplane.

You jam your feet onto two small metal platforms covered with leather footholds, which don't appear much more substantial than the grips that used to hold your feet to rollerskates as a kid.

The small of your back leans against a hand-size metal brace. A thick canvas belt, which is connected to a metal bar protruding from the wing like a lightning rod, is tightened around your middle. The belt around your waist is your lifeline.

What do you wear to a wing-walk? The same clothes you wear to the office with the addition of a leather aviator helmet and goggles, which sit askew over eyeglasses.

Encouraging you to wave to onlookers, Hughes taxies to the runway, idles the throbbing engine briefly, then kicks on the power. For showmanship, he blows a burst of pink smoke from under the fuselage and barrels down the runway.

From toes to scalp, all your muscles tighten into a body-length grimace. You almost forget to wave.

The thunder of the propeller and the force of the shove of air against the body at 85 miles an hour are the first surprises. You instinctively brace against the hand-size piece of metal bar in your back, and hope it doesn't break for the first time.

Then the bumping of the runway surrenders to the thumping of your heart and the plane leaves earth.

Instantly the ground gives way to blue sky and clouds and your next surprise comes — the realization that you are actually standing on top of a plane wing in the sky. It is a haunting feeling.

You recall the old days of solid office floors, the lawn, sidewalks, even elevators. Your thoughts wander to loftier things as Hughes banks over a cemetery on the edge of Detroit City Airport.

Hughes circles the airport at about 800 feet and then rapidly descends for a buzz of the field. Your stomach is doing very well — it probably is only 50 feet behind you.

At mid-runway, Hughes yanks the stick and catapults the plane almost vertically back to 800 feet, much to the surprise of the beginner's circulation system.

The air rushes into the lungs, even as you hold your chin to your chest to get out of the draft. For the most part it is fresh air but you experience another dimension you would have missed in a closed-cockpit plane — a whiff from a factory smokestack.

But after the first pass, the flight seems secure. You forget the engine's roar. The wind in your face feels good. Your lifebelt is still as tight as it was when they strapped you in and the metal brace presses comfort because you wedge them in deeper and deeper.

You aren't wing-walking but "wing-standing." For a few moments as you watch the freeways, sky, skyscrapers, homes and clouds, the world is a peaceful place and it is a nice day for flying.

Hughes banked evenly and slowly to the left again, lined us up with the runway, went in and touched down without a bump.

The pilot with the handlebar moustache has worked with three professional wing-walkers and with other amateurs.

"Have you ever wing-walked?" he was asked.

"Not on your life. There aren't enough pilots I'd trust," Hughes winked. "I'm no dummy."

Brothers try to earn living by fishing in the Ohio River

EUREKA, Ohio (AP) — Some people may think the Ohio River is a heavily polluted stream, nearly barren of fish. Not Ed and Kenny Feustel.

They know better.

The Feustels are commercial fishermen. They are among a small but growing number of people attempting to make a living by fishing in the Ohio, one of the nation's largest rivers.

They were on the river, which runs beside this tiny Gallia County community, one evening recently. And while they checked their nets, their sister and brother-in-law — Gloria and Butch Triplett of Gallipolis — sat on the Feustel brothers' small floating dock, talking about catfish in particular and the river in general.

"I've seen Ed and Kenny pull catfish out this long," said Mrs. Triplett, extending her arms wide. "I hope they catch some today because you just wouldn't believe the size they get to be."

"Yes," chimed her husband. "Some of them would run five feet and weigh as much as 60 pounds."

Triplett checked the three lines he had in the river and then spat disgustedly at the muddy water.

"No luck today," he said. "Usually they bite good when the water's like this."

"My brothers love the river," said his wife. "Our father loved the river and they must take after him. They've been catching catfish, bass, crappie, eels, gars and you name it.

"I filet the catfish and roll them in egg and cracker crumbs. They're delicious. Used to be you couldn't eat anything you caught in the Ohio."

"That's right," said Triplett. "That was before the federal government cracked down on these boats and plants that were polluting the river. Before that, the fish tasted too oily to eat."

Just then, the Feustel brothers came chugging upstream, checking their nets as they came.

"Did you catch anything?" shouted their sister.

"Not much," replied Ed Feustel, "Just these few here in the bottom of the boat. The river dropped too fast. It must have been four foot higher yesterday."

The Feustels came ashore and loaded a dozen 36-inch catfish into a large can. Ed Feustel carried the catch up to their pickup truck while his brother secured the boat.

"We got our commercial license back in February," said Kenny Feustel. "We found the fishing was best during the spring. Why, we were pulling in between 600 and 800 pounds a week back then."

The Feustels got their commercial license from the State of West Virginia, which controls the river to the low water mark on the Ohio side. Theirs was among 26 such licenses issued since the first of the year, said Alpha Gerwig, an employe in the West Virginia Department of Natural Resources.

She said the state's 1969 legislature authorized commercial fishing on the Ohio. The practice began in 1971 but soon was curtailed because of a mercury scare that swept the nation.

"Then," she said, "after the river was tested, commercial fishing began again in 1973. The number of permits has been increasing each year since then."

The law permits residents of Ohio and West Virginia only to fish commercially in the river between Pittsburgh, Pa. and Huntington, W.Va. Ohioans pay $100 for a license while West Virginians pay $25.

Mrs. Gerwig said of the 26 licenses issued this year, "Thirteen went to Ohioans and the same number to West Virginians."

Although the number of commercial fishermen is increasing, the river's potential is hardly being scratched, according to Michael Hoeft. He studies the river at the natural resources department's wildlife testing station near Point Pleasant.

"Last year," he said, "The commercial catch was between 10,000 and 13,000 pounds. We figure the channel catfish potential is about 500,000 pounds. The carp potential is about the same."

Hoeft says the State of West Virginia regularly checks the river.

"The river is cleaner and the fish are cleaner," he said.

"There's a good market for the fish. The fishermen get about 50 cents a pound at the river bank," he added. "The live haulers who put them in tanks and take them to the pay lakes — commercial fishing lakes — get up to 95 cents a pound."

Public Pensions Part IV

Solutions for pension funds must come from cities, states

Associated Press Writer

The cures for public pension funds that promise workers more than taxpayers can afford will have to come from the cities and states themselves. The search for solutions at the federal level is floundering.

Since the New York City crisis brought to light the pension problems of many cities and states, officials have tried to identify the nation's trouble spots.

A recent study by the brokerage firm of Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., for instance, concluded that five state-administered pension systems "appear to be underfunded to a significant degree." That means the state governments have made pension promises to its employes, but haven't faced up to the costs. Nor have they been willing or able to put aside the necessary cash to pay the future costs.

The states named in the study are Illinois, with an unfunded pension debt of $2.99 billion; Massachusetts with $7.4 billion; Connecticut with $2.1 billion; Michigan with $1.9 billion; and Florida with $1.8 billion.

Among city pension systems with giant unfunded pension debts are New York, where five plans have an estimated $8 billion in unfunded liabilities, and Washington, D.C., where three plans are unfunded by $1.8 billion. The Los Angeles City Fire and Police Pension System has unfunded liabilities of $1.69 billion.

Other city systems such as those in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh are facing pension problems, but no one really knows how many of the more than 6,000 public plans across the country might be headed for trouble.

Where problems do exist, experts believe the solutions lie in successfully answering several questions:

—What is the pension supposed to do for the worker?

—What will the city or state's pension promises cost future and present taxpayers?

—If the cost is too high, what can be done to control it?

The first question of what a pension is supposed to do is subject to disagreement.

In recent congressional testimony, Bernard Jump and Edward Cupoli of Syracuse University said: "Some would argue that a pension is merely a form of deferred compensation and should be evaluated accordingly. Some view pensions, or more precisely, extraordinarily large pensions after comparatively short service — as in the case of police and fire fighters — as rewards for hazardous work."

The two men said they disagreed with both views and accepted the position put forth by New York's Permanent Commission on Public Employe Pension and Retirement Systems which said: "The career public employe — the individual who devoted a working lifetime of 30 or more years to public service — should be guaranteed at normal retirement age an income which will allow him to maintain his pre-retirement standard of living."

The step of instituting benefit or contribution changes can be painful, costly and politically difficult for the city or state.

Massachusetts, whose 100 state-administered pension plans have always been on a pay-as-you-go basis, had to start from scratch in its search for solutions.

In 1974, the Massachusetts Retirement Law Commission identified a $7.4 billion unfunded pension liability in the state system. At that time, the state had appropriated $260 million in tax dollars to cover pension costs. A year later, costs shot up to $400 million. The commission estimated that $810 million a year for the next 40 years would be needed to put the state systems on a rational financial basis.

Commission Chairman Carmen Elio said one factor contributing to the problem was a cost-of-living provision fully matching each annual boost in the inflation rate. That provision contributed to an annual growth rate of about 30 per cent in the last five years, according to Elio.

The state legislature finally agreed to what amounted to a moratorium on new benefit increases until the commission could evaluate any boosts.

The study found that 30 years ago, half of a worker's pension cost was funded by the employe's contribution of 5 per cent of his or her annual salary.

'Traveling salesmen' are arrested

If they didn't lose them, at least they never got them.

In a con game with a new and up-to-date twist, a pair of salesmen apparently sold some $200 worth of phony t-shirts to a number of local firms in early June, and the merchants were left holding canceled checks – and no shirts.

The Stoddard County Sheriff's Department said that about the first week of June two salesmen allegedly came to Dexter, and contracted with a number of firms for "personalized t-shirts that would supposedly bear the name of the business, complete with "modern design and bright colors."

The salesmen allegedly took money (for example, $25 for four dozen shirts) and said the merchandise would be delivered in "about two weeks."

Two weeks came and went, then three weeks and then four and still no t-shirts.

The salesmen had left their "business number," an Illinois telephone number. A couple of the businessmen called the number and found a surprised party on the other end who didn't have the faintest idea what they were talking about.

A few of the businessmen went to the prosecuting attorney and sheriff, and warrants were sworn out against Anthony Russo and Gerald Frunzi, who allegedly had at one time lived in the Perryvile area.

Four of the business firms ripped off by the salesmen were Gene's Trading Post, Dexter Sales and Service, Jim's Sporting Good and A&D Cycle Sales.

Word of the warrant was spread by law enforcement channels throughout Missouri.

The sheriff reported Tuesday that a Stoddard County deputy had left for Howell County (West Plains) to pick up Frunzi, on the warrant charging fraudulant representation.

Frunzi was picked up in Howell County Monday, reportedly still selling t-shirts.

'Traveling salesmen' are arrested

If they didn't lose them, at least they never got them.

In a con game with a new and up-to-date twist, a pair of salesmen apparently sold some $200 worth of phony t-shirts to a number of local firms in early June, and the merchants were left holding canceled checks – and no shirts.

The Stoddard County Sheriff's Department said that about the first week of June two salesmen allegedly came to Dexter, and contracted with a number of firms for "personalized t-shirts that would supposedly bear the name of the business, complete with "modern design and bright colors."

The salesmen allegedly took money (for example, $25 for four dozen shirts) and said the merchandise would be delivered in "about two weeks."

Two weeks came and went, then three weeks and then four and still no t-shirts.

The salesmen had left their "business number," an Illinois telephone number. A couple of the businessmen called the number and found a surprised party on the other end who didn't have the faintest idea what they were talking about.

A few of the businessmen went to the prosecuting attorney and sheriff, and warrants were sworn out against Anthony Russo and Gerald Frunzi, who allegedly had at one time lived in the Perryvile area.

Four of the business firms ripped off by the salesmen were Gene's Trading Post, Dexter Sales and Service, Jim's Sporting Good and A&D Cycle Sales.

Word of the warrant was spread by law enforcement channels throughout Missouri.

The sheriff reported Tuesday that a Stoddard County deputy had left for Howell County (West Plains) to pick up Frunzi, on the warrant charging fraudulant representation.

Frunzi was picked up in Howell County Monday, reportedly still selling t-shirts.

No word was received on Russo -- or the t-shirts.

Four-run sixth keeps Anna alive

A four-run uprising in the sixth inning gave the Anna-Cobden Fuzzies a 6-4 victory and another chance in their best-of-three series against the Sikeston Saints. Sikeston had just claimed the lead for the first time, 3-2, in the fifth when the visitors exploded against Sikeston ace Don Miller for the winning tallies. Mark Chamnes belted a triple over the center fielder's head with two down to give the win to lefty Greg Cruse.

Now a 2 p.m. game Sunday afternoon at Anna will decide who will advance into the league's championship series. Cape leads the other preliminary series 1-0 after a 7-4 victory over Perryville Wednesday night. Those two teams play again tonight at Cape.

"You know," said manager Tom Masterson. "Knowing the situation coming in tonight and with us throwing Don Miller, I wouldn't have given a nickel for Anna's chances tonight."

But shaky defense and Cruse's mixture of pitches put the Saints' backs to the wall. Miller fanned the first two to start the game, but the third batter, Cruse, popped a single to the opposite field. A walk followed. Then, Cruse stole third and scored on a bad throw. A. C. Lewis' single gave Anna a 2-0 lead.

Down 2-1 going into the fifth, erratic defense by Anna gave the hosts a short-lived lead. Dave McClarty walked and Masterson, the designated hitter, was hit by a pitch. They were sacrificed to second and third by Charlie Miller and, when Don Taylor's popup bounced off secondbaseman Rick Bittle's glove, the sacks were filled. Rick Eisenbach legged one out to short and, when the shortstop's throw was wild, a second run crossed the plate.

Lewis started the really with his third hit of the game. Grant Dambach ranged far into the hole to grab Jim Keller's grounder and force Lewis at second. Then Miller walked weak-swinging Blayne Smith and Sheldon Ayers singled in a run. A popup was the second out, but Chamnes ripped one high and deep to center to score two runs and make it 5-3. A hit by Rick Bittle made it 6-3 and Cruse had all the runs he needed.

The Saints did add another marker in the eighth on Schatzley's infield hit, a passed ball and Saulter's single, but Cruse was never in trouble the rest of the way. It was Miller's first loss this season.

Righthander Bob Blankenship will start Sunday's game for Sikeston.

SHS Football starts Monday

First practice for the Sikeston Bulldogs in 1976 will begin at 9:30 Monday morning at the Dog House. All prospective team members have been urged by coach Terry Smith and his assistants to attend an early session Sunday afternoon at 5 p.m. at which time equipment will be handed out.

The upcoming season, expected to be a good one for the Red-and-Black, will start September 3 for ten returning starters and 23 lettermen. The team defense was a weak spot a year ago, but replacements up from last season's junior varsity are expected to give that platoon a boost. Senior David Shell is expected to step into Ron Priday's shoes as quarterback.

Returning starters for the Bulldogs are: Tackle Hal Butler at 6'4" and 205 pounds, End Paul Gilbow at 6'6" and 205 pounds, Runningback Paul Bean at 6'1" and 175 pounds, Runningback James Wilder at 6'2" and 195 pounds, Quarterback David Shell (safety last year) at 5'10" and 170 pounds, Noseman Wayne Turpin at 5'11" and 210 pounds, Tackle Wayne Sumlin at 6' and 190 pounds, Linebacker Mark Heeb at 6' and 185 pounds, and defensive backs Garry Griffin and Will Kaiser, both about 5'10" and 160 pounds.

Low-Flying Missiles

The Navy and Air Force are pushing ahead to develop a new, low-flying missile that will foil enemy defenses, according to a Conference Board analysis of the new defense budget. The Navy is budgeting $183 million for this missile in fiscal 1977, up from $94 million last year. And the Air Force is requesting $79 million for this weapon, up from only $29 million in fiscal 1976.

Aces win Sikeston Invitational

The Sikeston Aces made it two tournament championships in as many weeks over hometown rivals, the Sikeston All-Stars, as they knocked off the Stars 5-0 last night in the finals of the 9-10 year-old division of the Sikeston Little League Tournament.

In the 9-10 year-old consolation game, Charleston blasted Dexter 15-1. The Sikeston Aces and Dexter Americans picked up quarterfinal round victories in the 11-12 year-old tournament.

The Aces got shutout pitching from Chris Stewart, who went all the way on the hill and ripped a single and double to boot. Stewart gave up seven hits in the game to the All-Stars, including two each to Doyle Hutton and Doug Pollard, but never surrendered more than two safeties in a single inning.

Brooks Sherman doubled and scored for the Aces in the first to give Stewart all the runs he would need. The Aces scored a single run in the second without the aid of a hit, then added two more in the fourth. All-Star starter Brad Priday was tagged for six consecutive hits in that inning, but the loss of three Aces runners on the basepaths kept the scoring down.

Stewart helped himself with a fifth-inning double that scored John Fair, who had walked. The All-Stars threatened to score several times, including a bases-loaded opportunity in the third, but failed to cash in on their chances.

Robert Merrill and Mike Buchanan had two hits apiece for the Aces to go along with the two basehits by Stewart, who was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player.

Charleston scored three in the first, five in the second and seven in the fifth as they blasted Dexter 15-1 to win third place. Bostic tossed a two-hitter at the Dexter team which scored their lone tally in the fourth.

Charleston banged out fourteen hits in the game, including three each from Sybert, Morris and Smith. They also took advantage of eight walks by McCain and Miller, the Dexter pitchers. Dexter took home the sportsmanship trophy.

In the 11-12 year-old tournament, McBride tripled and homered for Dexter, both crucial blows, as the Americans stopped Paducah 7-3 in the first quarterfinal game of the evening. McBride tripled to cap a four-run second inning that put Dexter on top, then homered with two on in the third to account for all three runs for the Americans in that inning. Eubanks and Heitman also had two hits each for Dexter, who outhit Paducah 8-4. Brian Becker was the winning pitcher, fanning twelve Paducah batters.

Mike Hurley blanked the Dexter Nationals on three hits as the Sikeston Aces raced to a 10-0 victory in the other 11-12 year-old game. Hurley struck out nine and scattered three hits while also swatting a triple and a single with the stick.

The Aces scored four in the first off Dexter starter Gant, who suffered from control problems. Montgomery came on in the second, but the Aces also reached him, scoring two in the second, one in the third, one in the fifth and two more in the sixth.

In tonight's semifinals, the Sikeston All-Stars meet Poplar Bluff at 6:30. The Dexter Americans and the Sikeston Aces showdown at 8:00.

The tournament will conclude Saturday night, with the consolation game at 6:30 and the championship contest at 8:00.

Player Periscope

Both of Southeast Missouri's professional baseball pitchers made improvements in their statistics this past week, while the area's two non-pitchers struggled.

Puxico's Galen McSpadden, recovering from a slow start with the Amarillo, Texas AA farm club of the San Diego Padres, got a complete game victory in his only start this week, tossing a six-hitter. McSpadden now has won three in a row and is 9-6 on the season, sporting a fine ERA of 2.90.

Mark Littell of Gideon, still shining in his rookie season with the Kansas City Royals, earned his eleventh save of the season for the American League Western Division leaders. Mark, the Royals' number one righthanded arm out of the bullpen, has won six games in the relief role against only three losses. Littell not only leads the Kansas City staff in saves, but also in earned run average (2.11). Surprisingly, although not a starter, his 64 strikeouts are third on the Royals team.

In the hitting department, Malden's Gary Blaylock suffered through a miserable week at the plate with the Royals' Jacksonville AA team. He is now hitting .228 with five homers and 38 RBI's.

Steve Coulson saw limited action for the Yankees AA team at West Haven, batting only four times. Coulsen is hitting a respectable .273 with two homers and 35 ribbies.

Four-run sixth keeps Anna alive

A four-run uprising in the sixth inning gave the Anna-Cobden Fuzzies a 6-4 victory and another chance in their best-of-three series against the Sikeston Saints. Sikeston had just claimed the lead for the first time, 3-2, in the fifth when the visitors exploded against Sikeston ace Don Miller for the winning tallies. Mark Chamnes belted a triple over the center fielder's head with two down to give the win to lefty Greg Cruse.

Now a 2 p.m. game Sunday afternoon at Anna will decide who will advance into the league's championship series. Cape leads the other preliminary series 1-0 after a 7-4 victory over Perryville Wednesday night. Those two teams play again tonight at Cape.

"You know," said manager Tom Masterson. "Knowing the situation coming in tonight and with us throwing Don Miller, I wouldn't have given a nickel for Anna's chances tonight."

But shaky defense and Cruse's mixture of pitches put the Saints' backs to the wall. Miller fanned the first two to start the game, but the third batter, Cruse, popped a single to the opposite field. A walk followed. Then, Cruse stole third and scored on a bad throw. A. C. Lewis' single gave Anna a 2-0 lead.

Down 2-1 going into the fifth, erratic defense by Anna gave the hosts a short-lived lead. Dave McClarty walked and Masterson, the designated hitter, was hit by a pitch. They were sacrificed to second and third by Charlie Miller and, when Don Taylor's popup bounced off secondbaseman Rick Bittle's glove, the sacks were filled. Rick Eisenbach legged one out to short and, when the shortstop's throw was wild, a second run crossed the plate.

Lewis started the really with his third hit of the game. Grant Dambach ranged far into the hole to grab Jim Keller's grounder and force Lewis at second. Then Miller walked weak-swinging Blayne Smith and Sheldon Ayers singled in a run. A popup was the second out, but Chamnes ripped one high and deep to center to score two runs and make it 5-3. A hit by Rick Bittle made it 6-3 and Cruse had all the runs he needed.

The Saints did add another marker in the eighth on Schatzley's infield hit, a passed ball and Saulter's single, but Cruse was never in trouble the rest of the way. It was Miller's first loss this season.

Righthander Bob Blankenship will start Sunday's game for Sikeston.

SHS Football starts Monday

First practice for the Sikeston Bulldogs in 1976 will begin at 9:30 Monday morning at the Dog House. All prospective team members have been urged by coach Terry Smith and his assistants to attend an early session Sunday afternoon at 5 p.m. at which time equipment will be handed out.

The upcoming season, expected to be a good one for the Red-and-Black, will start September 3 for ten returning starters and 23 lettermen. The team defense was a weak spot a year ago, but replacements up from last season's junior varsity are expected to give that platoon a boost. Senior David Shell is expected to step into Ron Priday's shoes as quarterback.

Returning starters for the Bulldogs are: Tackle Hal Butler at 6'4" and 205 pounds, End Paul Gilbow at 6'6" and 205 pounds, Runningback Paul Bean at 6'1" and 175 pounds, Runningback James Wilder at 6'2" and 195 pounds, Quarterback David Shell (safety last year) at 5'10" and 170 pounds, Noseman Wayne Turpin at 5'11" and 210 pounds, Tackle Wayne Sumlin at 6' and 190 pounds, Linebacker Mark Heeb at 6' and 185 pounds, and defensive backs Garry Griffin and Will Kaiser, both about 5'10" and 160 pounds.

Low-Flying Missiles

The Navy and Air Force are pushing ahead to develop a new, low-flying missile that will foil enemy defenses, according to a Conference Board analysis of the new defense budget. The Navy is budgeting $183 million for this missile in fiscal 1977, up from $94 million last year. And the Air Force is requesting $79 million for this weapon, up from only $29 million in fiscal 1976.

Aces win Sikeston Invitational

The Sikeston Aces made it two tournament championships in as many weeks over hometown rivals, the Sikeston All-Stars, as they knocked off the Stars 5-0 last night in the finals of the 9-10 year-old division of the Sikeston Little League Tournament.

In the 9-10 year-old consolation game, Charleston blasted Dexter 15-1. The Sikeston Aces and Dexter Americans picked up quarterfinal round victories in the 11-12 year-old tournament.

The Aces got shutout pitching from Chris Stewart, who went all the way on the hill and ripped a single and double to boot. Stewart gave up seven hits in the game to the All-Stars, including two each to Doyle Hutton and Doug Pollard, but never surrendered more than two safeties in a single inning.

Brooks Sherman doubled and scored for the Aces in the first to give Stewart all the runs he would need. The Aces scored a single run in the second without the aid of a hit, then added two more in the fourth. All-Star starter Brad Priday was tagged for six consecutive hits in that inning, but the loss of three Aces runners on the basepaths kept the scoring down.

Stewart helped himself with a fifth-inning double that scored John Fair, who had walked. The All-Stars threatened to score several times, including a bases-loaded opportunity in the third, but failed to cash in on their chances.

Robert Merrill and Mike Buchanan had two hits apiece for the Aces to go along with the two basehits by Stewart, who was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player.

Charleston scored three in the first, five in the second and seven in the fifth as they blasted Dexter 15-1 to win third place. Bostic tossed a two-hitter at the Dexter team which scored their lone tally in the fourth.

Charleston banged out fourteen hits in the game, including three each from Sybert, Morris and Smith. They also took advantage of eight walks by McCain and Miller, the Dexter pitchers. Dexter took home the sportsmanship trophy.

In the 11-12 year-old tournament, McBride tripled and homered for Dexter, both crucial blows, as the Americans stopped Paducah 7-3 in the first quarterfinal game of the evening. McBride tripled to cap a four-run second inning that put Dexter on top, then homered with two on in the third to account for all three runs for the Americans in that inning. Eubanks and Heitman also had two hits each for Dexter, who outhit Paducah 8-4. Brian Becker was the winning pitcher, fanning twelve Paducah batters.

Mike Hurley blanked the Dexter Nationals on three hits as the Sikeston Aces raced to a 10-0 victory in the other 11-12 year-old game. Hurley struck out nine and scattered three hits while also swatting a triple and a single with the stick.

The Aces scored four in the first off Dexter starter Gant, who suffered from control problems. Montgomery came on in the second, but the Aces also reached him, scoring two in the second, one in the third, one in the fifth and two more in the sixth.

In tonight's semifinals, the Sikeston All-Stars meet Poplar Bluff at 6:30. The Dexter Americans and the Sikeston Aces showdown at 8:00.

The tournament will conclude Saturday night, with the consolation game at 6:30 and the championship contest at 8:00.

Longley's departure has impact on Staubach

AP Sports Writer

"I guess it was his way of saying 'goodbye,'" said Dallas starting quarterback Roger Staubach after he was slugged by teammate Clint Longley.

Longley, the Cowboy's No. 2 signal-caller, was suspended after the one-punch fight that resulted in stitches over Staubach's left eye.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry said Staubach "will be able to play Saturday night" when the Cowboys play host to the Denver Broncos in a National Football League preseason game.

"Danny White, of course, will play the second half instead of Longley," said Landry.

White, who chose to play in the World Football League after the Cowboys made him their No. 3 pick in the 1974 draft, connected on 10 of 21 passes for 101 yards in last week's loss to the Los Angeles Rams. He also appears to have solved part of Dallas' kicking problems, punting four times for a 47.5 average last week.

Before the Longley-Staubach episode, the Cowboys, a perennial contender in the National Conference, have had their problems. Dallas has yet to win in two outings. But they have been playing the cream of the NFL crop.

Denver has posted a 1-2 record, losing last week to San Francisco 17-7 as Broncos rookie Craig Penrose impressed with six completions on 11 passes for 75 yards, including a 22-yard TD strike to Bill Van Heusen. Denver starter Steve Ramsey was nine of 15 for 113 yards in the first three periods.

The long NFL weekend begins tonight when the New York Jets play their second game in 48 hours, taking on the Oakland Raiders at Yankee Stadium. The Jets, 0-2, lost 16-14 to the New York Giants Wednesday night on a 34-yard field goal with 16 seconds remaining in the game. The contest had been postponed from Monday because of Hurricane Belle.

Besides the Denver-Dallas collision, Saturday games will pit Pittsburgh at Washington, Los Angeles at Seattle, Baltimore at Chicago, Detroit at Cincinnati, Philadelphia at Miami, the New York Giants at Houston and Tampa Bay vs. Atlanta at Jacksonville, Fla.

Sunday, Kansas City travels to San Francisco and Green Bay plays at New England.

On Monday, the St. Louis Cardinals and San Diego Chargers will play the first NFL game to be staged outside North America. The two teams will meet in Tokyo at 6:30 p.m., Japan time. It will be 5:30 a.m., EDT.

The Raiders will continue to vpw $quarterbacks against the Jets. Starter Ken Stabler will begin, but Oakland will take long looks at Dave Humm, Larry Lawrence, Mike Rae and Jeb Blount. The Jets will start Joe Namath, who went all the way in the loss to the Giants, but Coach Lou Holtz says rookie Richard Todd will play "90 per cent of the game."

Sooners coming back to pack?

NORMAN, Okla. (AP)—Oklahoma may have won back-to-back national championships, but coach Barry Switzer and crew aren't having illusions of continued grandeur heading into the 1976 college football campaign.

No team has ever won three straight national titles, and the Sooners don't figure to either—on paper, that is.

But make no mistake, the Sooners will be a very good football team, and they'll compete for the Big Eight title.

And they may have something to say, one way or another, in who ultimately wins the mythical crown since their schedule includes such national powers as Texas and Nebraska, plus California of the Pacific Eight.

The Oklahoma wishbone is expected to roll on, despite the graduation of quarterback Steve Davis, running star Joe Washington and the split end tandem of Tinker Owens and Billy Brooks.

But the defense, beset by injuries in the spring, faces the critical problem of replacing the All-American trio of tackle Leroy Selmon, noseguard Dewey Selmon and end Jimbo Elrod.

"I think we'll be a good team, but remember that those other people we play against will be good, too...I'd feel a lot better about the situation if we hadn't suffered all those injuries last spring," says Switzer.

Only noseguard Reggie Kinlaw, a sophomore, was able to display his talents in the defensive interior in the spring. The other likely starters were hurt, including tackles Anthony Bryant, a starter last year, sophomore Phil Tabor and Richard Murray, who also is in the noseguard picture.

Bright spots are the return of linebackers Bill Dalke and Daryl Hunt and a secondary, anchored by cornerback Jerry Anderson and safety Zac Henderson, that could be the best in Sooner history.

"If people try to compare us with what we've been in the past, we're not going to be very good. But if they compare us with other people, then we won't be too bad," says defensive boss Larry Lacewell.

Offensively, the Sooners will be led by Dean Blevins, a junior with speed and plenty of savvy, backed up by soph Thomas Lott.

Proven performers include in halfbacks Horace Ivory and Elvis Peacock and fullback Jim Culbeth. Soph Kenny King was a sensation in the spring game at fullback, but could be moved back to halfback if George Cumby, a redshirt, lives up to expectations. Also competing for playing time will be Billy Sims, the heralded sophomore from Hooks, Tex., and Woodie Shepherd and Jimmy Rogers, all halfbacks.

Depth and injuries also are a problem in the offensive line, which will be anchored by tackle Mike Vaughn, 6-6, 290, providing surgery has solved his back problems.

"We should be a good offensive team," says Switzer. "Dean Blevins and Thomas Lott will improve with time. Our running backs are good. Victor Hicks (a sophomore) will be one of the best tight ends in the Big Eight. He has really improved since last year."

Kuhn goes for DH in series

PHOENIX (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn cast the crucial vote in a decision to permit use of designated hitters for the first time in the 1976 World Series.

Then Kuhn came up with an encore later Thursday with another tiebrea z24ere to endorse bonus payments for the players, "subject to discussion with the Players Association.

Kuhn's first shot came when American and National league club owners emerged from their separate caucuses with opposite views on use of designated hitters. The AL, which has used an extra hitter for the pitcher since 1973, wanted to use them not only for the series but for all postseason, all-star and exhibition games with NL clubs. NL owners opposed it altogether.

Kuhn couldn't buy the whole AL platform, but he went along with the DH rule for the World Series in alternate years.

"I cast a vote with the American League proposal to use designated hitters in alternate years in the World Series, beginning in 1976," said Kuhn.

Kuhn named a six-man committee consisting of the league presidents and four others from both leagues to "come up with a formula for uniform use of the designated hitter throughout both leagues."

The AL owners had proposed using the designated hitters in World Series games in their own parks.

"Designated hitters will be used in every game of the 1976 World Series," Kuhn declared.

He said the DHs would not be used in the 1977 series, but would return in 1978 and in alternate years thereafter.

Kuhn also supported the AL proposal, over solid NL opposition, for expanded performance bonuses to deserving players.

Kuhn said the performance bonuses, subject to player approval, would be allowed for batters, based on hitting average, runs batted in, homers, slugging percentage, stolen bases, runs scored, total bases and bases on balls.

For pitchers, the bonuses would be tailored to games won, earned run averages, saves and winning percentage.

The 24 club owners also endorsed a resolution to compensate Kuhn and other baseball officials in case a federal court awards a judgment to Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley. Finley filed the suit after Kuhn blocked his $3.5 million sale of players Joe Rudi, Rollie Fingers and Vida Blue.

Eagles move in first place spot

The Eagles slipped into sole possession of first place in the Sikeston Fastpitch Softball League Thursday night, ripping Marks Food Mart 9-0. Marks had been tied for first along with the Eagles and Steward Steel, which was idle.

John Chessor tossed a four-hit shutout to get the victory over Bob Stinnett. Stinnett was tagged four eight runs in the third inning, with the big blow being a two-run double by Jerry Taylor. The Eagles had scored a single run in the second. Stinnett settled down to mow the Eagles down after that, but his team couldn't make a dent in the big lead, with Chessor throwing brilliantly for the victors.

In the other game, the Bank of Sikeston pulled into a second place tie by defeating Eby's Distribbuting 4-3. Mike Cook's two-run homer capped a five-run first for the Bank, who also got three in the fourth. Dave Mulcahy was the winning hurler, while Steve McElyea got the loss.

The Eagles, with a record of 14-6, are a half game ahead and have four games left, three of them against contending teams. Steward Steel and the Bank of Sikeston are tied at 14-7, while Marks dropped a full game behind at 14-8.

Soph Kenny King was a sensation in the spring game at fullback, but could be moved back to halfback if George Cumby, a redshirt, lives up to expectations. Also competing for playing time will be Billy Sims, the heralded sophomore from Hooks, Tex., and Woodie Shepherd and Jimmy Rogers, all halfbacks.

Depth and injuries also are a problem in the offensive line, which will be anchored by tackle Mike Vaughn, 6-6, 290, providing surgery has solved his back problems.

"We should be a good offensive team," says Switzer. "Dean Blevins and Thomas Lott will improve with time. Our running backs are good. Victor Hicks (a sophomore) will be one of the best tight ends in the Big Eight. He has really improved since last year."

Kuhn goes for DH in series

PHOENIX (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn cast the crucial vote in a decision to permit use of designated hitters for the first time in the 1976 World Series.

Then Kuhn came up with an encore later Thursday with another tiebrea z24ere to endorse bonus payments for the players, "subject to discussion with the Players Association.

Kuhn's first shot came when American and National league club owners emerged from their separate caucuses with opposite views on use of designated hitters. The AL, which has used an extra hitter for the pitcher since 1973, wanted to use them not only for the series but for all postseason, all-star and exhibition games with NL clubs. NL owners opposed it altogether.

Kuhn couldn't buy the whole AL platform, but he went along with the DH rule for the World Series in alternate years.

"I cast a vote with the American League proposal to use designated hitters in alternate years in the World Series, beginning in 1976," said Kuhn.

Kuhn named a six-man committee consisting of the league presidents and four others from both leagues to "come up with a formula for uniform use of the designated hitter throughout both leagues."

The AL owners had proposed using the designated hitters in World Series games in their own parks.

"Designated hitters will be used in every game of the 1976 World Series," Kuhn declared.

He said the DHs would not be used in the 1977 series, but would return in 1978 and in alternate years thereafter.

Kuhn also supported the AL proposal, over solid NL opposition, for expanded performance bonuses to deserving players.

Kuhn said the performance bonuses, subject to player approval, would be allowed for batters, based on hitting average, runs batted in, homers, slugging percentage, stolen bases, runs scored, total bases and bases on balls.

For pitchers, the bonuses would be tailored to games won, earned run averages, saves and winning percentage.

The 24 club owners also endorsed a resolution to compensate Kuhn and other baseball officials in case a federal court awards a judgment to Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley. Finley filed the suit after Kuhn blocked his $3.5 million sale of players Joe Rudi, Rollie Fingers and Vida Blue.

Eagles move in first place spot

The Eagles slipped into sole possession of first place in the Sikeston Fastpitch Softball League Thursday night, ripping Marks Food Mart 9-0. Marks had been tied for first along with the Eagles and Steward Steel, which was idle.

John Chessor tossed a four-hit shutout to get the victory over Bob Stinnett. Stinnett was tagged four eight runs in the third inning, with the big blow being a two-run double by Jerry Taylor. The Eagles had scored a single run in the second. Stinnett settled down to mow the Eagles down after that, but his team couldn't make a dent in the big lead, with Chessor throwing brilliantly for the victors.

In the other game, the Bank of Sikeston pulled into a second place tie by defeating Eby's Distribbuting 4-3. Mike Cook's two-run homer capped a five-run first for the Bank, who also got three in the fourth. Dave Mulcahy was the winning hurler, while Steve McElyea got the loss.

The Eagles, with a record of 14-6, are a half game ahead and have four games left, three of them against contending teams. Steward Steel and the Bank of Sikeston are tied at 14-7, while Marks dropped a full game behind at 14-8.
